BAY SHORE ROAD TO BE FORMALLY OPENED SUNDAY

Daly City is expected to be well represented at the celebration of the opening of the San Francisco link of Bayshore boulevard, which will be held next Sunday, October 20, at the county line.

City officials, members of civic and fraternal organiations and all citizens interested in the completion of this link of the Bayshore boulevard are expected to meet at the City Hall in time to be in the parade that will leave for South San Francisco at 12:30, where they will join the caravan from other towns and cities of San Mateo county and proceed to the county line, where a program in celebration of the event will be presented.

Coucilman A. J. Bodien, acting for the City Council, requests that those who take part in the parade decorate their cars with American and California state flags. Stickers will be provided for all machines. Come out and let's have a big crowd from Daly City at the celebration.

Commenting upon the completion of the new road, C. C. Cottrell, manager of the highway bureau of the California State Automobile Association, says:

Dedication of San Francisco's new Bayshore highway with the formal opening of 6.6 miles of this route, next Sunday, October 20, means more to the motoring public than the mere provision of a new highway down the peninsula. This new break in the "bottle-neck" of San Francisco's transportation facilities consists of the 3.1 miles unit built by the city from Army street and Potrero avenue to the county line and the state-built unit of 3.5 miles from the county line to the South San Francisco underpass, the two having been designed and carried forward as one unit by the two agencies.

Connecting at the underpass with the present Bayshore highway to Fifth avenue, San Mateo, the new section thus provides, from the heart of San Francisco to a strategic point on the peninsula, 18 miles of modern motor route built to the highest standards, a model transportation artery whose utility is unsurpassed.

Dedication of this new route distinctly marks a new era in street and highway construction. Whereas, only a few years ago, streets and highways were located and built along the lines of least resistance so far as the topography of the country was concerned, this new highway has been constructed with a disregard of that topography but with the idea of making it a line of least resistance to the motorist. The few intervening years have been a transition period from the old to the new order of things in road-building in this state.

Both the city and state have acquired a one-hundred-and-twenty-five-foot right of way. This provides ample width for the present roadway and anticipates the future.

The city has built a pavement one hundred feet wide and a twelve-and-one-half-foot sidewalk on each side. This pavement is eleven inches thick, consisting first of an eight-inch concrete base upon which is placed three inches of asphalt. Modern requirements demand in a pavement surface two things—that it be smooth and non-skid in character. These have been obtained by using a real coarse rock bound together by asphalt and spread smooth by the latest type of machines.

Nor is there to be any tearing up of this pavement for sewers, water-mains, conduits or whatnot. Future requirements have been anticipated and these have all been installed.

The only surface structures that will be observed will be traffic signals and lighting standards, and the wires for these are all underground. Three pedestrian underpasses have been installed at strategic points.

The 3.5 mile section south of the city limits, built by the state, represents somewhat of a different type of construction, for it is a state highway in all that its name implies. The other section is a city boulevard.

The outstanding features of the state highway unit are its drastic location, deep cuts and massive fills. Combined these make as direct an alignment as may be secured. True there are one or two short sections of five per cent grade, but to the motor car of today these mean absolutely nothing. Most of the road is level and hardly any grade exceeds three or three and one-half per cent.

The road has been graded to a full width of sixty feet upon which has been placed a temporary pavement, forty feet wide, of heavy crushed rock and an oiled macadam surface. The only reason for saying "temporary" is because the state intends to replace it with a heavier type as soon as the fills have received their ulti-

ADVOCATE BETTER CLASS BUILDINGS

On Monday evening, October 14, there was a regular meeting of the City Council, all members answering the roll call and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

A communication received from the Daly City Merchants requesting that some action should be taken by the board to require the building in the future of better class buildings on Mission street, between the county line and Vista Grande avenue, as they were advised by the Board of Underwriters of the Pacific that this would be necessary before a reduction in rates could be expected in the business district, was referred to the ordinance committee and the building committee for a study and report.

A petition with twenty-seven signatures was received from citizens in the vicinity of Citrus and Woodrow streets, asking that a mail box be installed at that point. The clerk was instructed to write to Postmaster Todd regarding the matter.

The Council unanimously endorsed the San Mateo County Water District. The establishing of this district is regarded as a very important factor in the county. It is true that the water supply throughout the peninsula is becoming lower and lower each year, and a shortage in the future is feared. The water district will overcome this situation. In brief the plans of establishing this district is to run two large water mains up and down both sides of the county; one along the Bayshore district, and the other along and near the Skyline boulevard. These mains are to be fed by water from the Hetch Hetchy project, and sold to the various municipalities when needed, at a wholesale rate. At present Daly City has a good supply of water, but it is well to go in with the other peninsula towns on the matter, and be prepared for the future.

The Burlingame Garden and Flower Club sent a communication to the Council suggesting that the chrysanthemum, because of its prominence, be made the official flower of San Mateo county. This was referred to thet city planning committee for consideration.

Mrs. Marshall drew the board's attention to the condition of the sidewalk on Gambetta street, near Mission street, explaining that the same was covered with drifting sand, making the sidewalk impassable. This was referred to the street committee.

Sunday, October 20, is the date set for the opening of the Bayshore highway. There will be an automobile parade, and every citizen of Daly City who can go is invited. The leaving time will be 12:30 p. m. sharp, from the City Hall.

A letter of thanks and appreciation was received from Mrs. G. W. Hopman, widow of the late Officer George W. Hopman, thanking the City Council, the police department and all the rest of the city officials for the kind consideration they showed in her late bereavement.

This being the first regular meeting since the death of Officer Hopman, the following resolution of condolence was introduced and adopted by the board. Then the meeting adjourned out of respect to the the late officer.

Whereas, death has called from the ranks of the police department of the City of Daly City, Officer George W. Hopman; and

Whereas, the late George W. Hopman was a good citizen of the City of Daly City, conscientious in the performance of his duty, an excellent man of family, and a faithful follower of the dictates of sound philosophy of life; be it therefore

Resolved, That the Board of Councilmen of the City of Daly City, County of San Mateo, does hereby extend its sympathies and condolences to the widow of the late George W. Hopman; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this board, and another copy sent to the widow of the late George W. Hopman.

BANK MANAGER RESIGNS TO ENGAGE IN BUSINESS

R. C. MacArthur, manager of the Daly City Branch Bank of Italy, National Trust & Savings Association, for the past nine years, has resigned his position.

Mr. MacArthur has been with the local bank since its organization in 1920. At that time Mr. MacArthur, with but one assistant, conducted the entire business. Today the Daly City Branch has a staff of six employees. Mr. MacArthur, as manager of the bank, has been in touch with the affairs and progress of the city and has great confidence in its future. It will be pleasing to his host of friends in this vicinity to learn that Mr. MacArthur has plans for entering business here after enjoying a well earned vacation.

MERCHANTS WIN SNAPPY CONTEST

Showing a great deal more fight than they had displayed in their two previous contests, the Daly City Merchants' baseball team put over a 6 to 2 win last Sunday, defeating the Walter Schulken nine on the South Side diamond.

After a wobbly start, Dick Randall, the Merchants' cool-headed pitcher, settled down and pitched as fine a game as could be hoped for. He allowed only five hits, struck out seven batters, and issued three bases on balls. All of these walks came in the first two frames, when the opponents scored their runs.

The boys from Daly City staged a four run rally in the eighth inning to completely rout Fieber, Schulken's slabman, and put them in the lead for the first time in the contest.

P. Slaon, the Merchants' first baseman, again played a bang-up game on the initial sack, where he made no less than four difficult putouts, which were eclipsed only by his batting power. Pat collected three hits in as many times at bat, one of these safeties being a triple.

Drucker and Rettig also turned in a great game. Both of these boys went errorless while accepting several hard chances.

Another sight that caused merriment among Daly City's rooters was the catching of F. Strand. Fred has apparently returned to his old form. This means, stay close to the bags, you opposing base runners.

This was the twenty-second game the Merchants have won this season, out of twenty-nine starts, bringing their average up to .758 per cent.

Duke Cruchoff, the most consistent hitter on the local team, was absent from the lineup on Sunday. This young man is setting a pace for the rest of the boys, his present mark being .417 per cent. He has hit safely 45 times in 108 attempts.

SKIPPER RUNS INTO PIER; CREW DEMAND RESIGNATION

It is reported that the "Queen of Daly City," the fast motor boat owned by Duke Cruchoff, Peter Pavlos and William Strand, was formally launched at South San Francisco recently, with Captain Duke Cruchoff in charge. On the way to Blackrock, it is said the Captain ran the boat into a pier near Berkeley, causing some damage to the pier, it being feared that he will be called upon to face a heavy damage suit. It is also understood that the members of the crew have demanded the Captain's resignation, because of the crash, and the further fact that when he dropped anchor at night and arose in the morning he found the craft fast in the mud. You can imagine the language used by the crew.

SOUTH CITY SEEKS MORE TERRITORY

Annexation of San Bruno, Lomita Park, Capuchino and Millbrae to South San Francisco was discussed at an enthusiastic meeting held in the city hall at South San Francisco last Monday night. Over fifty representative citizens attended the gathering, at which the predominant sentiment seemed to favor the proposed merger. A committee of fifteen citizens representing the interested communities was named to make a careful study and report back to a general meeting to be held in a month. John Cross, of San Bruno, was named temporary chairman of the committee.

GENERAL PERSHING P. T. A. MEMBERS ENJOY LUNCHEON

There was an executive luncheon held at the home of Mrs. Clifton, 147 Winchester street, on Friday, October 11, Miss Victoria Roussel, president of the Seventeenth district, being the guest of honor. Miss Roussel gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the requirements necessary to constitute a standard or a superior association.

Plans were completed for the children's party to be held the afternoon of October 31, at the General Pershing school. Owing to unforseen circumstances this party will be held in the afternoon instead of the evening, as already published.

A number of the officers and members arranged to be present at a Round Table conference to be held at San Mateo on Friday, October 18.

The ladies who were at the luncheon were Mesdames Fletcher, Hassett, Katch, Watson, Crosbie, Douglas, Watt, Landini, Cobb, O'Neil, McNair, Clifton and Hughes. Thanks are due the hostess for a very enjoyable and instructive afternoon.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S NIGHT IN CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday night is especially for young people. Yes, the whole program, and it is planned and will be put over by young people. Our Union is in the Loyalty Crusade which takes in the whole bay region as far as Monterey and Tracy. As our attendance goal we have chosen fifty-seven; the second night we topped fifty. Come Sunday evening, at 6:45, to 5724 Mission street, to the little Baptist church, and you will be welcome.

Double Wedding Celebration

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bennett and daughter Georgina spent Sunday at Mare Island at the home of Mrs. Bennett's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Lemon, the occasion being the celebration of a double wedding anniversary. This is the first time the two families have been able to celebrate together since their marriage twenty-three years ago, in Seattle. The reunion was a very happy one and will long be remembered by all who were present. The young aviator was unable to be present on account of preparing for his transport license, which he expects in the near future.

Pioneer Resident Passes

August Parmisano, a pioneer resident of Daly City, passed away last Wednesday at his home on Mission street, after a few months' illness. Mr. Parmisano was the beloved husband of the late Marie Parmisano, and father of Mrs. M. Rancatore, Samuel J., Anthony, Louis, Rose and Albert Parmisano, and Mrs. J. Reardon, and uncle of Frances Sanfilipo. He was a native of Italy. Funeral services will be held this Saturday morning, with a requiem high mass celebrated for the repose of his soul at St. Maximus church at 10 o'clock.

TAX PAYING TIME WILL COME SOON

It will soon be time to again step up and pay your taxes. A. McSweeny, county tax collector, announces that he is endeavoring to extend the service rendered by his office "in premaling tax bills, but in case you do not receive your bill by November 1, write the tax collector's office and one will be sent immediately. When changing your address, write at once so this office will have your new address. The success of this service depends upon the co-operation of the tax-payers, and it can be given only to the tax-payers who keep us advised of a permanent address.

"If you do not own the property on the statement, pass the statement to the owner, or return it to this office.

"Always return your tax statement with your remittance. It is a valuable help to this office and enables us to make a prompt return of your receipt to the correct address. No letter is required if you return the statement with your payments.

"The board of supervisors made a substantial cut in the tax rate this year, reducing it from $3.07 to $2.89. This 18 cent reduction must not be considered, however, to cover every district in the county, there being an actual raise in the rate in some of the districts, over last year. Two dollars and eighty-nine cents is the lowest rate for the county in eight years."

Tax Collector McSweeney reports for the fiscal year 1929, 65,784 bills, an increase of 5,700 over 1928.

Thees bills will be sent out from his office beginning after the third Monday in October, as fast as they can be handled. The tax-payer has until the first Monday in December to pay taxes without any penalty added.

For the benefit of those in the outlying districts, Mr. McSweeney will have a representative to collect taxes in the various cities, as has been the custom in the past. Dates set for same will be published in your local newspaper.

The lowest rate is the Alpine school district, of $3.693, and the highest is in Millbrae, of $9.666 per $100. This include several additional special rates, such as light, fire and mosquito, etc.

BANK CELEBRATING SILVER ANNIVERSARY

Twenty-five eventful years of banking history, in which it has risen from obscurity to become the chief exponent of branch banking in the United States, are being celebrated by the Bank of Italy this week.

Thursday, October 17, is significent, various speakers pointed out, in that it is the birthday of a western institution to which the East, for the first time in history, has very definitely turned for financial leadership.

On that date, also, James A. Bacigalupi, who has guided the destinies of the giant organiation for the past five years—years that have witnessed many changes within the Bank and, by reason of its progressive policies, in banking the world over—turned over his office to Arnold J. Mount, senior vice-president, who will serve as chief executive until October 17, 1933.

In his anniversary message to employes, Bacigalupi declares that the United States stands at the threshold of a new era in banking in which branch banking is destined to be established on a greatly enlarged scale throughout the country. The demands of big business, operating on a basis never before approached, the necessities of agriculture requiring extensive financing, make the change inevitable.

When amendments to the National Bank Act permit this expansion—a change that he intimates may be expected to occur early in the administration of his successor, Arnold J. Mount—the writer points out, the Bank of Italy, leader in the movement will continue to maintain its position in the front rank of branch banking institutions.

Stupendous as have been developments in the bank during the term of his stewardship, he looks to see them surpassed during the term of his successor, by taking full advantage of the opportunities that will come with a revision of the banking laws.

As an indication of what the future holds in store, he cites the record of five years' growth, particularly the growth that followed the consolidation of the branches within California in 1927.

The Bank of Italy of 1924, with 86 banking offices in 58 cities, while a sizable bank for those days, he said, was a mere pigmy compared to the giant of today, with its 292 officies operating in 166 California cities. Capital, surplus and undivided profits of the Bank, combined with the then Stockholders Auxiliary Corporation, (now National Bankitaly Company,) in 1924 were $36,206,781,49. Capital, surplus and undivided profits of the bank, combined with National Bankitaly Company, after the consolidation of 1927 were in excess of $200,000,000.

Total resourses of the Bank of Italy of 1924 were $326,509,405. Today they are $851,705,810. Savings deposits while great, measured by the standards of 1924, were $204,591,886. They are today $477,953,271, an increase of $273,161,384, representing a gain of 133.5 per cent. Commercial deposits show a corresponding increase from $92,384,118, a gain of $134,804,104 or 145.9 per cent.

BOARD APPROVES FLOWER SHOW AT SAN MATEO GYM

The San Mateo county board of supervisors at their meeting last Monday formally endorsed the San Mateo County Fall Flower Show, to be held at the San Mateo Junior college gymnasium today, tomorrow and Sunday. The supervisors also named the chrysanthemum as the county's official flower.

Sponsors of the floral exposition, the Burlingame-San Mateo Flower Club and the Peninsula Gardeners' Association, were thanked for their movement in behalf of the county and its $7,000,000 flower industry, and were pledged financial and moral support by the board.

B. S. Gibsen, president of the flower club, C. Warren, its secretary, and L. Smaus, manager of the show, appeared before the supervisors.

Dr. F. W. Stampff, of Burlingame, past president, told the board that San Mateo county is rapidly becoming the focus of flower culture in the United States. He said that the combined interest of the professional and amateur growers was responsible for the show. Applause greeted Dr. Stampff when he had finished explaining the purpose of the show and asked the board's support. Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey made the motion for endorsement and it was seconded by Supervisor Rosalie M. Brown.

The prize winning bouquet of chrysanthemums judged at the show will be mailed by airplane to Mrs. Herbert Hoover at the White House in Washington as the gift of the people of San Mateo county.

Roscoe D. Wyatt, secretary-manager of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, said the show was being widely advertised in San Francisco and the bay region. Department stores in San Francisco are devoting large space to exhibits of chrysanthemums and other flowers grown in San Mateo county, Wyatt said.

The board voted $25 from the advertising fund toward the printing of 10,000 cards reading "Just a Reminder of the Fall Flower Show in San Mateo." These will be distributed by the Boy Scouts.

BURLINGAME RENEWS REDISTRICTING DRIVE

Redistricting of San Mateo county will be advocated with renewed vigor in a campaign to be launched by the directors of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce.

Petitions for an immediate redistricting will be circulated immediately, according to George Williams, president of the chamber. When 3,200 signatures have been obtained, the petition will be presented to the San Mateo county supervisors, with a demand for prompt action.

Burlingame's plan for redistricting the county recently endorsed by representatives from different sections of the county calls for townships laid out according to population, instead of geography, making a more fair election of supervisors, it is claimed by the advocates of the redistricting plan.

MUSICAL EVENING IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

With Miss Mildred Swan in charge of the program for Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Presbyterian church, a number of surprises are promised. A flute and piccolo will be included in the instrumental selections, and a well known tenor, Eugene Brown of Stanford University, will render three solos. The program will probably crowd out the regular preaching service and the pastor will try to get in a ten minute sermon on "Looking for Bargains in the Department Store of Religion." This sermon is especially meant for the youth of the church, as this is Young People's Night in the great crusade movement in San Francisco and vicinity. Don't forget Sunday school at 10 a. m. prompt on Sunday. Rev. Stevenson always has something up his sleeve for the children. The place: Corner of Evergreen and Hanover.

FUN AND THRILLS AT DALY CITY THEATRE

Tomorrow is All Fun day at the Daly City Theatre, when Buster Keaton, the frozen-faced comedian, will appear in "Spite Marriage," said to be by far the funniest comedy special that this popular comedian has given to the screen. On the same bill Flash, the dog star, with Harry Gribbon and funny Polly Moran, will appear in another comedy special, "Honeymoon." Episode five of the serial "Fighting for Fame," and additional short subjects will make up an excellent bill.

For Sunday the Daly City Theatre will offer Snooky White and his players in another big stage act, together with James Murray and Barbara Kent in Uuniversal's "The Shake Down." On the same bill there will be episode six of "Fighting for Fame," a big serial thriller with Ben Alexander.

Monday night is Silver Nite, and will bring Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel to the screen in Warner Bros.' big special, "The Redeeming Sin."

For Tuesday, Louise Fazenda, with H. B. Warner and Jacqueline Logan, will be the feature attraction in a big chill and thrill story called "Stark Mad." If you have a weak heart, you had better not go, for this is said to contain all of the thrills and chills of various thrill stories boiled into one.

Wednesday night is Double Feature Night, and the Daly City will present Mrs. Wallace Reid's "Linda," with Warner Baxter, Helen Foster and Noah Beery. The second feature will be Farrell McDonald in "Riley the Cop," a big laugh hit.

Thursday will bring Laura La Plante to the screen in "The Last Warning," while for Friday Sam's Country Store and Lina Basquette, with Robert Armstrong and Carol Lombard in "Show Folks," will hold the screen.

EDUCATION WEEK TO BE OBSERVED IN NOVEMBER

The ninth annual observance of American Education Week will be held November 11-17, under the joint sponsorship of the National Education Association and the American Legion, according to the October Journal of the National Education Association.

The purpose of the American Education Week celebration is to keep before the public the aims, needs and achievements of the schools. The theme of the program, built around the relationships of the home and the school, emphasies the contributions of education to worthy home membership.

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers, which is co-operating in the activities of the week, defines the ideal home as one that is "economically sound, mechanically convenient, mentally stimulating, artistically inspiring, founded on mutual affection and respect, a place of unselfish love and service."

"GOLD DIGGERS" IN SECOND WEEK AT EMBASSY THEATRE

The mad-cap capers of Winnie Lightner, the crooning tunes of Nick Lucas and his guitar, and the world-famed dimpled knees of Ann Pennington usher in the second week of "Gold Diggers of Broadway" all natural color musical treat now at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco.

Names that everyone knows, stars that everyone like, form the cast of this pageant of song. Besides Winnie Lightner, Nick Lucas and Ann Pennington, there are Nancy Welford, Conway Tearle and Lillian Tashman.

"Gold Diggers of Broadway" gives the "inside dope" on the workings of these orriginal "gimme girls." They have their types and extremes just like any other profesison. And the way they pursue their "prospecting" in this all color production brings forth a steady stream of laughs.

AUTOIST FALLS ASLEEP; WAKES UP IN HOSPITAL

Charles Ray Atchley went to sleep at 4 a. m. Sunday in San Bruno, while driving his automobile. He woke up at 5 a. m. in the South San Francisco hospital. The crash occurred at Leipsic Crossing. One arm was broken and he was painfully cut and bruised. Atchley is a house painter and makes his home at the Southern, Hotel Pasadena.

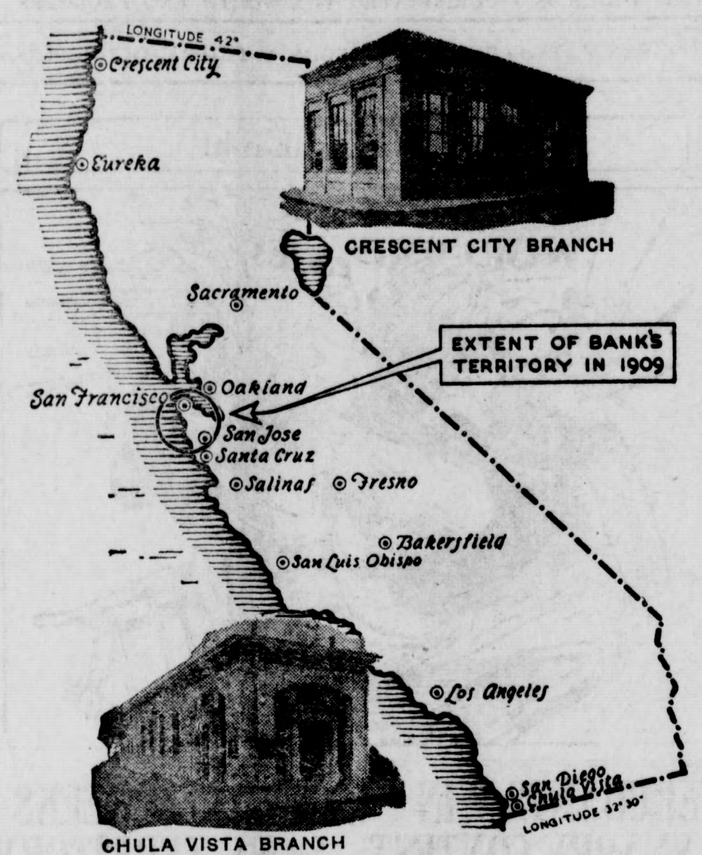
TWENTY-FIVE YEARS FINDS BANK COVERING THOUSAND MILE EMPIRE



The Bank of Italy is to celebrate its Twenty-fifth Anniversary on October Seventeen. The two buildings pictured above are its outposts, north and south. Between them lies a great, rich empire a thousand miles long, as the train speeds and the highways wind. Within that thousand mile expanse, California banking customers have, in a quarter of a century, built up the biggest branch banking system in the United States.

BACK in October, 1904, there was rooted in the fallow financial soil of California, an institution that in twenty-five years' time was to expand until it covered a thousand miles of territory and built up recources of approximately a billion dollars. That institution is the Bank of Italy.

On October 17, of this year, it is to observe its twenty-fifth anniversary, or Silver Jubilee, with fitting ceremony. In each branch in that thousand-mile expanse, there will be a reminder of some sort that a quarter of a century ago, the greatest branch banking system in the United States came into being to insure the prosperity and the financial security of hundreds of thousands of customers in California and elsewhere—the greatest customer list of any bank in the country.

Between the outposts of the Bank of Italy system are a thousand miles of fruitful plains, great mountain ranges that lose themselves in the distant blue horizons and vast sweeps of sand filled terrain. The modern and comfortable bank buildings that mark those outposts are situated, respectively, at Crescent City, Del Norte County, and Chula Vista, San Diego County. In between are the two largest cities on the Pacific Coast and an industrial and agrarian empire as rich as any other in the world.

Tremendous Sweep

In between are something like ten degrees of longitude, or the distance between the thirty-second and the forty-second parallels. That longitudinal sweep includes much of the transitional area dividing the sub-tropical and the north temperate zones. Within the area the economic, agrarian and climatic contrasts are equally marked. For instance, in the northernmost extremity, agriculture, horticulture and industry takes into account the periodically heavy rains that sweep in from the Arctic Aleutians, while in the southernmost extremity the products, industrial and otherwise are of the sort that profit by almost continuous sunshine. In short, in the 30,000,000 acres under cultivation in the state, there are grown virtually all of the products known to the two zones heretofore mentioned.

As another evidence of the size to which the Bank of Italy system has grown through the grace of its superb management and the unfailing faith of its great host of customers, no other country in the world can boast such an extensive and expansive system, geographically speaking, excepting Canada and Australia. If the California system which has been developed to its present size in a short twenty-five years, could be transported intact to the Continent, one tip might rest in London and the other in Florence, Italy. Otherwise placed, it might reach from the Orkney Islands, which mark the northernmost extremity of the British Isles, to Berlin, or it would cover the entire distance between Berlin and Rome.

In the first twenty-five years of its life, the Bank of Italy has built up a system whose present expanse could not be accommodated in any single European Country, with the exception of Sweden and Russia in Europe. Nor could it be accommodated in any state of the United States outside of California, not even excepting Texas.

Reasons For Growth

Using Crescent City as a pivot the Chula Vista extremity, if swung around in a half circle, would pass over the plateau states and over Laramie, Wyoming, and Butte, Montana, and would rest at a point several miles north of Vancouver, B. C. If one extremity were pivoted in San Francisco, the other might be swung around to touch Idaho Falls, Idaho, or Spokane, Washington. The system would extend from Los Angeles to Santa Fe, New Mexico.

If extended due east from Crescent City, the system would reach completely through three states and well into a fourth. If, by any chance, it were to locate intact in both the United States and Canada, the farthest north branch could be placed in Toronto and the farthest south branch in Atlanta.

Through the banking system, the widely different natural and economic factors found within its thousand mile expanse and its two longitudinal zones, are enabled to lend each other their own excess strength as represented by money resources, to make up for possible lack of such strength anywhere in the area. The system extends through a great cotton belt, a great citrus belt and a great deciduous belt, each of which need a particular type of financing to insure satisfactory production.

The Bank of Italy will have many reasons to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary on the seventeenth day of next October. But easily one of the biggest reasons is that, in its twenty-five years of life thus far, it has made the whole rich state of California tributary to Crescent City and to Chula Vista and to every branch bank city and district in between. A thousand miles of agricultural, horticultural and industrial empire serves these two outposts as well as it serves the great metropolitan centers within its boundaries.

PAULINE FREDERICK NOW AT THE MARION DAVIES THEATRE

Pauline Frederick holds the center of the Marion Davies screen in an all-talking version of the famous stage play "Evidence." This makes almost a dual appearance of Miss Frederick in San Francisco, as she is also playing in person at a local theatre.

"Evidence" is a striking drama of mother-love and devotion and gives Pauline Frederick plenty of chance to display her emotional genius. Lady Wimborne, an unfortunate victim of circumstances, played by Miss Frederick, is forced to leave her husband and son. She struggles to live down undeserved disgrace and finally wins back her place in her home.

Her husband is played by William Courtney, in his first talking picture. He will be remembered as the magician in "The Spider," that had a sensational run here several months ago. Conway Tearle is the devoted friend, and Lowell Sherman the profligate who causes all the trouble. Alec B. Francis, Myrna Loy and Lionel Belmore fill out the perfect cast.

NATURAL GAS BRINGS NEW PLANT TO OAKLAND

The Bay region has begun to get the new industries and payrolls that were predicted with the advent of natural gas. The Hazel Atlas Glass Company has just selected Oakland as the location of a new plant that will employ 150 men. Executives of the concern admit that natural gas was the deciding factor in their choice of a site and that the factory would have been located elsewhere if natural gas had not been available in this section. The Hazel Atlas Company manufactures glass tumblers, food containers and related lines of glassware and operates nine other plants in the United States, all of which use natural gas.

JOHN DRINKWATER KNOWS HIS THEATRE

It may be said of John Drinkwater perhaps more pertinently than of any other illustrious figure in the profession of English letters today: "He knows his theatre." As a young man, fresh from Oxford, Drinkwater entered the insurance business in Birmingham. Gathering together some kindred souls, they founded the Pilgrim Players, an amateur society, with which the future dramatist gained his first experience as actor and director. From this humble group of amateurs was evolved the world-famous Birmingham Repertory Theatre, with which Drinkwater was actively connected for more than a decade—as actor (he played more than fifty parts), as advisor, as director. His first adult play, "Cophetua," was presented in Birmingham in 1911, and in the years since, during which Drinkwater's fame has spread into the realms of poet, dramatist and essayist, the Birmingham Company has always had first call upon his plays.

Until recently, Drinkwater's plays have been hewed to a serious mood—his searching, scholarly, historical dramas "Abraham Lincoln," "Oliver Cromwell," "Mary Stuart," and "Robert E. Lee." Two years ago, however, Drinkwater wrote a vivacious, brililant comedy—a comedy of pungent characterizations and delicate dialogue. Instantly a hit in Birmingham, this piece, "Bird in Hand," was taken to London, where it ran for a year at the Royalty Theatre, and now for eight months the comedy has been delighting New York audiences.

Commencing Monday evening, October 21st, the original London company of "Bird in Hand," which was chosen and directed by Mr. Drinkwater, will play a limited engagement at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, with the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday, and local theatregoers will have an opportunity to see this latest work—in merry mood—from the same pen that has written such widely diversified things as the drama "Abraham Lincoln," the lovely verses "Blackbird," and the keen commentary test to "An Outline of English Literature." Among the London players in the cast are Freda Bruce Lockhart, Olga Slade, Percy Rhodes, Denis Mantell, Douglas Jefferies, Richard Littledale, Eliot Makeham and Arthur Ridley.

For a Quarter of a Century Bank of Italy

HERE is a story of trail blazing, of pioneering and empire building...measured in progress and achievement, as well as in years! ❧ Since October 17, 1904...when the Bank of Italy first opened its doors for business...sweeping changes, unmatched in other chapters of the world's history, have been made in modes of living, the habits and customs of the people, and in business methods and practices. ❧ In terms of material progress we are far removed from the days of the hansom cab, the two-cylinder automobile, and the usage of a generation typified by these vehicles. The era of aviation and of radio is upon us. ❧ While in its own program of development, the Bank of Italy has kept pace with the changing demands of the day...always in stride with the requirements of business ...yet in its belief in and interpretation of the fundamental principles of sound and prudent banking there has been no deviation from the course laid out twenty-five years ago, when the institution was founded. ❧ Character, integrity, honesty and fair dealing remain the same. There can never be compromise with right. The fundamental rules, described by the founder of the bank at its inception, must prevail, without reference to time or circumstance. There is now, and always will be, the strictest interpretation of these precepts "...of the people, by the people, for the people..." which have endured in the policies of this institution for a quarter of a century. ❧ The directors and officers of the Bank of Italy, in renewing their expression of adherence to these principles, believe that it is fitting to acknowledge with sincere gratitude, the fine spirit of loyalty evidenced by the hundreds of thousands of Californians whose generous patronage has made possible the record of achievement

WONDERS OF THE LAW

After serving two years and four months of a life sentence, Bert N. Garstin, once a prominent newspaper man, has been pardoned by Governor Roosevelt of New York. Garstin is not a murderer, but was a victim of the New York law which makes mandatory a life sentence for persons convicted of a felony for the fourth time. Garstin was so convicted for cashing bad checks, the total amount of which was less than $500. The first offense was in 1906, the second in 1910, the third in 1912, and the fourth in 1927. In each case the crime was committed during a drinking spree.

Ordinarily he is a good citizen, having held some of the most responsible positions in the newspaper world, including those of business manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Detroit Times, Lansing Capital News, and Louisville Herald-Post. Prior to his last conviction he had abstained from drink for fifteen years.

Only a few days ago Earl Peacox, convicted of murdering his young wife and burning her body, was given only a minimum sentence of twenty years, in the same state which imposed the life penalty on Garstin.

Such are the wonders of the law.

POOR SPORTSMANSHIP

It is reported that after this year no more radio broadcasts of world's series baseball games will be permitted, through the fear of the magnates that it might keep a few people from attending the games in person.

Few persons so situated as to make it possible to see a world's series would stay at home even for a radio report simply to save the price of admission. Yet millions in distant parts of the country would enjoy the radio broadcasts, which would create a greater desire to actually witness the games at a future time.

As William C. Grunow, a leading radio manufacturer, recently pointed out, "the stay-at-homes of today are the first in line at the box-office tomorrow." And this is as true of boxing and other sporting events as it is of baseball. The public has been very generous in its support of professional sports, and the promoters should have business judgment enough to see that depriving the public of these radio reports will cause indignation and resentment which are likely to be reflected in the attendance records of the future.

The proposed action of the magnates is petty, narrow-minded, and an evidence of poor sportsmanship on their part. It is to be hoped that those who control the situation may have intelligence enough to see the point and reverse their decision.

SHEARER A HUMORIST

Those who have not read the testimony of William B. Shearer in newspapers which have published it in detail have missed some of the most sprightly repartee in contemoraneous history.

Shearer's activities in connection with the naval conference at Geneva in 1927 are being investigated by a Senate committee, because of his employment by several large shipbuilding concerns, supposedly to spread propaganda in behalf of a bigger Navy, and to insist on an international agreement which would permit the United States to maintain adequate naval defense.

It appears that the main objection to this activity lies in the fact that his employment was secret, and only came to light when he sued his employers for a large sum he claimed to be due for his services.

Testimony brought out by the investigation is so conflicting that it is difficult to judge what really happened, but the affair has been enlivened to the point of uproarious comedy by Shearer's brilliant sallies, in which he has not spared his dignified senatorial inquisitors.

Those who have followed the case must be convinced that whatever Shearer may be, he is no fool. His quick wit may be illustrated by his reply to one question. Asked whether he had threatened to kill one of his ship-builder employers, he shot back: "I wouldn't threaten to kill a man who owed me money."

CITY OF WOMEN WORKERS

Probably in no other city is there so large a percentage of women regularly employed as in Washington, D. C., where the total reaches nearly 79,000, according to the census bureau. This is due principally to the great number required by the numerous government departments.

The largest group among this army of female workers naturally includes stenographers and other clerical employees. The second largest class is composed of professional women, among whom are many doctors, lawyers, teachers and nurses, the total for this group being about 8,800. Other occupations absorbing large numbers of women are connected with manufacturing and trade activities. A considerable number of women conduct businesses of their own.

In Washington, as elsewhere, greatly increased opportunities for employment were afforded women during the war, and the conditions which arose at that time have continued to a large extent ever since.

A GOOD IDEA

There is a wide-awake Chamber of Commerce in Paris, Illinois, a small city of around 10,000 inhabitants, which is making a detrmined effort to extend its trading area, with good prospects of success.

As a means toward the end sought, a series of thirty-seven half-page advertisements, one to run each week, will be placed in the Paris Beacon-News, setting forth the advantages of the town as a trading center.

The Chamber of Commerce, after trying various methods for building good will in the territory served by Paris merchants, has concluded that newspaper advertising is the most effective means of gettings its message to the public.

Other towns have adopted this plan for trade expansion with highly beneficial results, and many more might profit by their example.

IMMIGRANT WAR HERO

An Italian immigrant boy who came to America a few years before the World war recently received at the hands of President Hoover the highest military decoration an American soldier can win, the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Michael Valente is the hero so honored, his citation recounting his exploit of wiping out two nests of German machine guns, killing five of the enemy and making twenty-one others prisoners, assisted by a lone companion, on September 29, 1918, near Ronsscy, France.

Although Valente had to wait eleven years to receive the high recognition due him for his valorous service, it is pleasing to know that government red tape did not prevent his receiving it during his life time. Many deserving heroes are not so fortunate.

Red Rain Explained

A torrential fall of "red rain" in Manchuria almost destroyed the village of Fuyu, not far from Mukden, Chinese newspapers report. Pools of blood-red water formed in the streets, and the rain discolored houses. The Chinese inhabitants explained the red rain by saying that some superhuman huntsman had shot a dragon in the sky.

VINCENT DUNDEE BEATEN BY FIELDS

Baltimore Boy Gives Welter Champion Furious Battle.

Jackie Fields at the Coliseum in Chicago showed the Dundee family of Baltimore why he is the world's welterweight champion. In his first start as a title holder Fields whipped Vincent Dundee, brother of the man from whom he won the title, in the ten-round windup of the show that marked Jack Dempsey's debut as a promoter. The title was not at stake.

There were wide open spaces at either end of the remodeled Coliseum as the fighters entered the ring and as a financial success Dempsey's inaugural effort was hardly a knockout. The paid attendance was 7,260, and the gross receipts $31,574. This was nearly $20,000 less than had been expected.

The windup was a furiously fought battle and many at the ringside thought Dundee was entitled to a draw. Cleaner punching and a knockdown in the sixth round were the factors that counted for Fields.

One by one the old names are being removed from the English track and field records. The most recent to be supplanted is that established by L. A. Brown, former Penn star, whose time of 2 minutes and 12¼ seconds, established in 1911, was eclipsed recently by Cyril Ellis, British half mile champion. He covered the distance in 2 minutes and 11 1-5 seconds. This feat classes Ellis with D. G. A. Lowe and G. M. Butler as the only Englishmen who have established an individual world's running record since the war.

Noble Atkins, Texas Christian university star, varies as much as 30 pounds in weight while competing in various sports, and still keeps in perfect condition. During the football season he scaled between 210 and 217. At the end of the basket ball season he weighed only 187. He hovers around 200 while playing baseball.

Rockne is noted for his "elegant variations," as the professors put it, and he probably will uncork something pretty fancy when his team tackles the "impossible schedule" of nine tough games. Rockne's big fear, he says, is that his brood will burn themselves out emotionally, with the strain of meeting Indiana, Navy, Wisconsin, Carnegie Tech, Georgia Tech, Drake, Southern California, Northwestern and the Army.

Yale, Harvard and Princeton, the one-time "Big Three," still draw more than a little attention from eastern fans. Especially is this true this year with Harvard playing two intersection foes in Michigan and Florida in addition to the Army, Dartmouth and Yale. Yale traveling south to meet Georgia, in addition to engaging Army, Dartmouth, Maryland, Princeton and Harvard; and Princeton battling Cornell, Navy, Chicago and Yale among others.

FAMILY WAYS

Mr. and Mrs. Emu were calling on Mr. and Mrs. Ostrich one day when Mr. Ostrich began talking of the children.

The emu family look something like the ostrich family. They have very long legs but instead of beautiful feathers their bodies are covered with something which looks very much like gray hay.

Their necks, which are long, also have the same kind of hay covering.

"You see," said Mr. Ostrich, "we looked after our children together.

"In the daytime Mrs. Ostrich would sit on the eggs and at night I would tell her to rest and I would sit on them."

"Of course," said Mr. Emu, "it is something the way with us as it is with you.

"I help Mrs. Emu, but then I find she lets me take over all the work to do."

"To be sure," said Mrs. Emu, "and why not? I always say to myself:

"'If he's willing to work, it would be foolish of me to stop him.'

"Yes, that is what I always say."

"You certainly do," said Mr. Emu. "And you live up to your words, too."

"Don't you sit on your eggs during the day?" asked Mrs. Ostrich. "I like to have a hand in the hatching out of the eggs."

"How Grandly You Talk."

"I hardly call it having a hand in the hatching when you sit on the eggs, my love," said Mr. Ostrich, with a foolish smile. "And besides you haven't a hand."

"I know," said Mrs. Ostrich, "but it's something creatures say so I thought I would, too."

"You asked me a question," said Mrs. Emu. "Do you, or do you not, want to have it answered?

"From the way you are going on talking it would appear that you do not wish to be informed."

"How grandly you talk, Mrs. Emu," said Mrs. Ostrich. "To be sure I do wish to have my question answered."

"She talks grandly," said Mr. Emu, "because she can spend her time thinking of words and so forth.

"She does not have to work, nor even look after her children."

"Right, my dear," said Mrs. Emu, "but as I said before you always offer to help me, so I give right up to you."

"You give work right up to me," said Mr. Emu.

"It's this way," explained Mrs. Emu. "Mr. Emu finds me sitting on the eggs, and he always says:

"'Oh, can't I do that for you?'

"Now wouldn't it be extremely foolish for me to say that he could not.

"If he is so willing, I must be willing, too. Then I get used to being idle and doing nothing but wander about and I forget about Mr. Emu and the work, until I find he is looking after the children."

"I think you forget about me on purpose," said Mr. Emu, "but it makes no difference—for I do not mind hatching the eggs in the least."

"Do you hatch the eggs?" asked the ostrich.

"Yes," said Mr. Emu. "Mrs. Emu lays them. Then I hatch them out, and what is more I look after the children until they are able to care for themselves."

"Well, that is strange," said Mrs. Ostrich. "We like to divide the time."

"It simply means," said Mrs. Emu, "that you follow the ways of the ostrich family and we follow the ways of the emu family.

"We have different family ways—that's all."

Woman Protects Dog As She Kills Self

San Francisco.—Before Mrs. Pearl Alspaugh turned on the gas and lay down to die, she took precaution that her pet dog should survive.

When G. C. Alspaugh, her husband, employed at night in a laundry, returned home, he found his wife dead from the gas fumes. The dog also was unconscious, but later was resuscitated.

Alspaugh could ascribe no reason for the suicide save that his wife had been in ill health.

MAKES QUEER DEAL FOR GIRL OF 13

Trade Involved Four Mules and Log Cabin.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—A queer bargain of the hill country, in which a thirteen-year-old girl was bartered as a bride for four mules, a log cabin and a wagon, has been revealed to authorities here.

An investigation resulted in the arrest of the girl's father, Henry Gibbs, on a charge of converting the property of another.

Some weeks ago Edward Green of Detroit, father of four children by a former marriage, took thirteen-year-old Louise Gibbs of Cadiz, Ky., and married her, showing the clerk a letter purporting to be from her father, giving parental consent.

Gibbs said the letter was forged. He threatened Green with criminal action. The parental wrath subsided, however, when Green gave his new father-in-law two teams of mules, a wagon and a log cabin.

Louise, a slim child weighing about 100 pounds, quickly tired of married life and left her husband at Detroit, returning here to relatives. Green, is forty-three years old, ten years his father-in-law's senior.

Green pursued his child bride here and when she refused to return to Detroit with him, he demanded back his peace offering—only to find that Gibbs had sold mules, wagon and all for $325.

Gibbs thereupon had Green arrested on a charge of forging the letter of permission under which the marriage was performed. Green made peace in some way, and the charge was withdrawn. Then he turned around and had Gibbs arrested for selling the wagon and mules.

The case is to be investigated by the county grand jury.

Girl, 3, Killed by Bear Which Breaks Into Home

Winnipeg. — The three-year-old daughter of Fred Grorricicuk, Lowland, Man., was killed there recently when a large black bear, driven out of the neighboring bush by fire and hunger, broke into the Grorricicuk home and carried off the little girl.

Leaving her three children in the house, Mrs. Grorricicuk had taken her husband's supper out to him in the fields. When she returned she found the front door of the house battered in and the children missing. Crying to her husband, she rushed around to the back of the house and out into the yard, where she found the body of the little girl.

The other two children, seven and four years of age, had run to a neighboring farm, where it was learned later from the eldest child that the bear had attacked her first, but she had eluded it and, with her younger sister, had fled from the house.

Dies Among Strangers as Relatives Hunt Him

Raymond, Wash.—John Carlson, sixty-one, Naselle, Wash., died among strangers and was buried as an unknown only a few miles from relatives bending every effort to locate him.

He left Astoria, came here and registered at a local hotel. The clerk, in signing for him, wrote "John Koski" by mistake. The next day he was found dead in the room from natural causes.

His long stay from home caused anxiety in his family and a search was made. Trailing him to the hotel, Arthur Carlson identified the clothing of the dead man as that of his father

Bandit Is Chivalrous When Widow Is Victim

St. Louis, Mo.—Chivalry on the part of a bandit saved Mrs. Caroline Baldwin, a widow, of this city, from the loss of her money.

"Surely you wouldn't rob a poor defenseless widow," she exclaimed when the culprit walked into her confectionery store and brandished a pistol in her face.

"So you're a widow?" he replied, haltingly. "No I couldn't rob you then." He walked from the store.

Golfer Drives in Ditch; Ball Kills Big Snake

Fayetteville, Ark.—W. M. McRoy of Fayetteville killed a snake with a golf ball. McRoy drove and followed the ball into a small ravine. A snake, several feet long, was in its death wriggle. The ball had struck it squarely in the head and administered the fatal blow.

Motor Violin

A mechanical violin, said to play with an uncanny human touch, has been perfected by two French engineers.

It has a number of keys which press the strings like the left-hand fingers of a player, and a revolving bow which permits different degrees of pressure.

The violin is driven by two motors. One takes the place of the player's arm; the other imparts the swift movements of the wrist.

Starting Early

May Marriages Increase

Efforts in England to break down the prejudice against May marriages are meeting with success, for there was an increase of hymenial events in that month this year. The anti-May idea is inherited from the Romans, the medieval church copying them by forbidding marriage between Rogation and Trinity. The "closed time" for marriages was marked in calendars as late as the time of Charles II.

Hitting on All Eight!

Doctor Gives Hint to Lucky Salesman

IT'S a wise man that knows when he is slipping. Mr. R. F. Myers of 711 Rosedale Street, Baltimore, had the good fortune to get his tip straight from one of his doctor customers (he was selling for a pharmaceutical house) and since that lucky visit he has increased his business 50 per cent.

For two years he had been driving from town to town, and naturally this threw his elimination out of shape. He felt himself slipping. Cathartics only made him worse. Then one day he was calling on a wise old physician, and asked his advice. "What you need, my boy," said the doctor, "is a simple, easy, normal way to clean the poisons out of your system—we all have them—and with your kind of work they certainly cut down efficiency. Why don't you try Nujol?"

"Well, believe it or not," says Mr. Myers, "in a few days I felt like a new man. 'What's got into you?' asked the home office, 'your business has increased 50 per cent!'"

That's the great thing about Nujol. As soon as it begins to clean the poisons out of your system it makes you feel so well that you can almost always do a much better job.

Nujol is not a medicine and contains no drugs. It is perfectly harmless, forms no habit. It is simply bodily lubrication, which everybody needs. You, like everybody else!

Why put off good health any longer? Go into any good drug store and get a bottle of Nujol in a sealed package. Costs so little and means so much! Maybe you can increase your efficiency 50 per cent too

TRAIN BOYS FOR FATHERHOOD

By DR. I. M. ALLEN, Michigan School Superintendent.

BOYS ought to be trained for fatherhood just as much as girls ought to be trained for motherhood. Pre-parental education for girls has already been provided in the Highland Park schools. The next logical step is to extend pre-parental education to boys and to organize parental education classes, either as a part of the school curriculum or through the organization of child study groups by parent-teacher organizations. The greatest contribution the parent-teacher organization in any community can make to the schools is the promotion of child study groups among parents and future parents to secure a more widespread and scientific knowledge of the child.

Extension of the work of the parent-teacher association in providing physical examinations for children under school age to the realm of mental hygiene is also contemplated in Highland Park. Such a development would mean that by the time the child is ready to enter school for the first time a complete record of the history of his early mental development would be available in addition to physical records, thus materially aiding the school authorities in planning mental and social adjustments in extra-normal cases.

There is no short cut method for building character in the large. The schools operate on the theory that specific character traits have essential activities that contribute to the fixation of such character traits These activities the schools are selecting for emphasis. The home may render valuable assistance by encouraging participation in these activities.

CONSTITUTION IN DANGER

By JAMES M. BECK, Former U. S. Solicitor General.

Unconstitutional legislation is sapping the government, and unless the American public rebuilds a consciousness to constitutional authority the Constitution will cease to function. If our Constitution continues to disintegrate in its essential principles as much as during the last 25 years it may not survive beyond the experience of the children who are now living. Even the Union, because of its size and greatness, will one day be disrupted unless the spirit of the Constitution is reawakened and preserved in the hearts of the people.

Therefore I plead for an awakened conscience for Constitutional morality on the part of our legislators and the people. They should primarily determine these grave issues of Constitutionality for themselves. Unless they do so they are in grave danger of losing the benefits of the wisest instrument of statecraft that the wit of man has yet devised. Unless the people have a militant political conscience, the Constitution is doomed.

I question the present federal income tax as a change from the Constitutional clause assuring citizens that all direct taxes would be divided among the states in the same proportion as they exercise political power in the house of representatives.

This original Constitutional clause was inserted to prevent undue burden upon the more prosperous states. Yet, while a few great states like New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois pay more income taxes than all the other states, they play a relatively small part in deciding how the funds thus raised shall be appropriated.

NATION'S YOUTH WOMAN-MINDED

By PROFESSOR ROGERS, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

For a half century now the larger part of our young people have been trained exclusively by women teachers. Fifty years of this has produced a public incompetent to think politically and philosophically. Our American thinking is feminine thinking, inculcated by women teachers, highly competent in detail, rigidly idealistic, regardless of the working facts, and weak on critical examination.

The fault is not the children's nor the women's but that of the business men, who do, or at least should, manage their communities. It is not stinginess. We pay millions for educational fads, fancies and teachers, but we won't pay salaries sufficient to attract competent and strong men teachers to teach our young people.

Girls as well as boys need men teachers long before they reach the age of seventeen or eighteen. They need them at the beginning of adolescence.

I differ from the common wail that our young people are irreligious. They have no intellectual training which enables them to settle their religious problems adequately.

BRITISH LAXITY IN PALESTINE

By DR. STEPHEN S. WISE, Prominent Zionist.

I would not say that the British government is opposed to the establishment of the Jewish national home in Palestine. However, instead of "facilitating" it, as it is pledged to do, the mandatory power adopts a nonco-operative attitude in relation to the achievement of this object. The Wailing Wall incident is being prolonged into a continuing source of misunderstandings, but the Zionist organization maintains that it cannot bring about the removal of the offending official.

If the minor official is blameless, then the chiefs are guilty, and a strong and adequate leadership would bring to the attention of the British government the violation of the sensibilities of the Jewish builders of Palestine. It is the minor officials in Palestine who harass and will continue to do so until they are reminded that England loves fair play.

BUSINESS NEEDS ALTRUISM

By REV. DR. NIEDERMEYER, Perth Amboy, New York (Presbyterian).

The hardships of industry fall upon the employer or the employee according to whose side of the question is being presented. If all men observed Paul's injunction not to seek one's own but each his neighbor's good, the amicable adjustment of differences would be assured and justice would be sought and given by each.

If capital were honestly seeking labor's welfare and labor were as earnestly concerned about the wellbeing of the employer, all differences that might arise could be settled without either a strike or a closed factory.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

After being closed for a year, the Feather River Canyon highway connecting Oroville and Storrie in Plumas county is now open.

An inter-county council of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was formed at San Jose. Posts in Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Palo Alto and San Jose are included.

A public entrance is being built to the Feather River beach near the legion hall by the city of Oroville under the direction of E. B. Shreve, superintendent of streets.

Fire destroyed the grain warehouse of the Gibbs and Nohanberg Company at Califa, causing damage estimated at $70,000. More than 15,000 tons of grain were destroyed in the fire.

Permits for building amounting to more than $45,000 were issued at San Rafael during the month of September, according to Building Inspector Victor F. Becker.

The community hotel committee has delayed awarding contract for the new 48-room hotel in Lindsay, the bids showing a total of $126,000 for the structure, which is slightly higher than expected. A few changes will be made in the plans before the contract is awarded.

Construction of the Madera Irrigation district's $15,000,000 project involving erection of a dam and powerhouse on the San Joaquin river above Friant is largely contingent upon the district obtaining satisfactory contracts for the sale of power produced according to Lester P. Ready, consulting engineer.

The Public Utilities California Corporation, which has been buying small water companies throughout the state, has asked the State Railroad Commission's authority to take over the Washington Water and Light Company. For this concern, which operates in Yolo county near Sacramento, the purchaser purposes to pay $46,900 in common capital stock.

That portion of the Red Bluff-Susanville lateral located between Morgan Springs and Chester, a distance of twelve miles, is now undergoing improvement by the United States Bureau of Roads. The width of the grade will be twenty-four feet, the roadway twenty feet, while the cost of the project, amounting to $282,000, will be paid out of Forest funds.

Seventy-five per cent of those who enter the joint Tulare-Kings county tubercular hospital at Springville, Tulare county, are released with their cases arrested, according to the reports filed with the supervisors. As a result, the demand for admission has been forcing additions to the plant. The latest improvement will be a new administration building, to cost $20,000.

Charging that the Kern County Land Company, owning but 50 per cent of the land supplied by the system of the Kern Canal Company and its subzsidiaries, is making an effort to use 80 per cent of all the available water allotted to first-point users, a complaint filed by the Farmers' Protective Association of Kern county will be studied by officials of the State Railroad Commission at Bakersfield. The complaint of the Protective Association, filed by its president, F. A. Chamberlain, and its secretary, J. B. McCutchen, was presented in the form of a petition and bore the signatures of hundreds of water users.

Under an agreement entered into with the Butte Mining Company, the Keystone Mining Company has taken over 2300 feet along the old river channel on the Garland ranch in the Vallecito district, Calveras county, in exchange for stock and the assuming of obligations for payment on the property. Stockholders of the Butte are to receive half a share of Keystone for each share of Butte held, assessment paid. An assessment of 2 cents a share has been levied on Keystone. Drill holes on the property are declared to show the bed rock at 51 feet. A shaft has been started on the Keystone and is down 20 feet.

All the world is eating California sardines and buying more of them each year, says the district office of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Statistics for the fiscal year ending June 30 reveal that 40,838,582 pounds of tinned California sardines worth $3,440,204, were exported in 1928 and 49,604,670 pounds, valued at $3,931,512, in 1929. During the first six months of this year Asia took 13,000,000 pounds and the rest of the world 10,000,000 pounds. The Philippines are the greatest Oriental consumers, taking 6,000,000 pounds. Out of 5,000,000 pounds shipped to Europe, France and the United Kingdom took 2,000,000 pounds each. Argentine took a third of the 3,500,000 pounds that went to South America. Altogether the red-labeled oval one-pound tins of California sardines find their way to sixty-four forign countries.

Millions of dollars worth of fresh water needed for industrial and irrigation, is going to waste annually, due to lack of a barrier across the upper arm of San Francisco Bay, according to Vincent Wright of Alameda, a former resident of the delta region. Vincent urged the bay barrier as the most imoprtant feature of the proposed water conservation program now being studied by the state.

Excavations were started at Napa for a new $25,000 business building for Percy M. Quien, automobile parts dealer.

Visalia has long been selected as the meeting place for the 1929 state convention of the Young People's Society of the Church of God, November 9, 10 and 11.

Contract for construction of the dam in Green Valley, which will impound water for the Boy Scout swimming pool. has been let to Angus McKay and work will commence in the near future, according to City Engineer T. D. Kilkenny.

Bids will be opened October 15 by the Stanislaus County Board of Supervisors for construction of unit No. 2 and power house unit No. 3 at the county hospital. Provisions for the construction of the units were made in the last budget of the board and $80,000 was apportioned for the buildings.

With the completion at San Pedro of the $250,000 copra reducing plant for F. H. Merrill and associates about November 1, raw copra will begin to arrive at that port from the Philippine Islands at the rate of 30,000 tons annually. Copra receipts will then rival those of rubber.

The State Highway Commission voted state aid of $20,000 a year for five years to the Sutter-Yolo joint highway district, organized to improve roads through the Sutter Basin and construct a new bridge over the Sacramento River at Knights Landing. The highway commission made a four-day inspection tour of Northern California roads recently.

San Joaquin County Board of Supervisors has launched a drive to have all signboards removed from county highways to restore scenic beauties. Tracey Lions' Club was the first to co-operate directing all of its signs removed. The supervisors are passing a resolution of thanks.

Joe McKinnon, member of the Board of Supervisors of San Jose, is being acclaimed by fellow members of the board as an "Edison." McKinnon, instead of using a big brooming machine to dust off roads in his district previous to oiling, had a sulphur duster used with success. The sulphur duster cleans the dust from the roads but does not sweep the gravel base.

After lying dormant on California's statute books for about twenty-eight years, efforts are to be made to enforce the humane education law. The law requires that humane teachings be incorporated in the curriculum of elementary schools. This was announced by the Latham Foundation for the Promotion of Humane Education. The foundation has appealed to Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, to take steps to carry out the law.

A new method of determining stresses in large masses of concrete, said by many to be one of the greatest contributions to safe dam designing in this generation, has been worked out by B. F. Jakobsen, former Fresno engineer, now in Los Angeles. The Jakobsen theory has been tested with models at the University of Colorado and the University of Norway and found correct. The method is said to prove that formulas applicable to low gravity dams do not apply to those of higher construction.

The Kennedy Mining Company has commenced sinking its 4650-foot main shaft another 250 feet, preliminary to opening of new levels and a comprehensive campaign of lateral developments below the 4650-foot horizon. Extension of the shaft will parallel the dip of the ore body. The company is dropping fifty stamps on profitable ore and working 200 men. Steady production continues to be maintained by the Argonaut and Central Eureka companies, with developments on the lower levels of both mines reported satisfactory. Opening of new veins in the Old Eureka, generally known as the Hetty Green, continues to be energetically pressed by the Central Eureka management.

The date for dedication of a five ton granite marker commemorating the first discovery of quartz gold on Gold Hill, Nevada County, has been set tentatively as October 20. If that date is acceptable to the grand officers of the Native Sons of the Golden West the shaft will be unveiled then. The inscription on the shaft, selected by the Native Daughters of the Golden West, is to tell the history of the first discovery of gold in lode formation in the state. The site of the marker will command an excellent view of Grass Valley and the Sierra Nevada Mountains. It is expected that in time the area surrounding the marker will be reserved as a park.

The state division of highways has applied to the State Railroad Commission to construct three overgrade crossings near San Rafael and one in Humboldt county. The crossings would all be over tracks of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad. It is proposed to construct at California Park an overhead crossing one mile south of San Rafael at an estimated cost of $155,216. At Greenbrae, two and a half miles south of San Rafael, the Highway Department would construct a crossing costing $58,150. At Forbes Station, two and a half miles out of San Rafael, it proposes to construct a crossing costing $49,788.65. The Humboldt county crossing would be one mile north of Beatrice, and the cost would be $66,700.

Salinas motorists pay too much for gasoline. This was the statement ment made by a committee of the Salinas Chamber of Commerce, following an intensive investigation into the local retail prices of gasoline as compared with prices prevalent in adjacent districts. A lower freight rate recently has been secured, cutting the cost from 29½ cents a hundred to 22 cents a hundred, the committee shows. "The retail price in Salinas should be 21 cents per gallon," the report concludes. The current price is 22½ cents.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Leaves Corn Borer No Opportunity to Breed

One way to rid one's self of an unwanted visitor is to provide no place for the visitor to stay, and, following out this inhospitable line of reasoning, the Department of Agriculture has worked out a method of successful battle against the European corn borer.

Usual practice on farms, when cutting corn for shredding or ensiling, is to sever the stalks about 5 or 6 inches from the ground. This is due, of course, to the fact that the cutting blades on the mechanical cutters don't go any lower. These stubbles left in the field offer a haven to the larvae of the next season's crop of borers. The experts of the bureau of roads have worked out a new device which cuts the stalks at ground level, and which can be attached at small cost to the average binder.—Washington Star.

Makes Life Sweeter

Children's stomachs sour, and need an anti-acid. Keep their systems sweet with Phillips Milk of Magnesia!

When tongue or breath tells of acid condition—correct it with a spoonful of Phillips. Most men and women have been comforted by this universal sweetener—more mothers should invoke its aid for their children. It is a pleasant thing to take, yet neutralizes more acid than the harsher things too often employed for the purpose. No household should be without it.

Phillips is the genuine, prescriptional product physicians endorse for general use; the name is important. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. registered trade mark of the Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Find Boy's Body in Goat's Grave

Two-Year-Old South Carolina Murder Mystery Becomes More Baffling.

Anderson, S. C.—A mystery already more than two years old became all the more baffling recently when Anderson county officers opened a grave at Seneca, near here, and found what physicians declared was the body of a youth.

For two years it had been believed that this grave contained the bones of a goat, interred by a man who had been accused of trying to collect many thousands of dollars from insurance companies by burning his home and disappearing September 27, 1927. This man, Harry K. Sligh, later was found in California and was brought back here and tried for conspiracy to defraud insurance companies. He was acquitted.

Discovery that the grave really contains human bones was the result of a mother's unceasing efforts to find her boy, who disappeared enroute to Florida from his home at Huntington, W. Va., two years ago. In company with Carl and James Hoover, friends, Harry Loving was hiking through Georgia. On the night of September 27, 1927, the trio asked permission to spend the night at the home of Sligh, living at Ocilla, Ga., near the South Carolina line.

Home Burns at Night.

During the night the Sligh home burned, and a long investigation followed. The insurance companies holding policies on Sligh's life were suspicious, although bones supposed to be those of Sligh were found in the charred ruins of the house and were buried at Seneca, S. C. No one knew that the Hoovers and Loving were at the Sligh home on that eventful night.

Detectives employed by the insurance companies instituted a search for Sligh, and months later he was found in Los Angeles, Calif. He was brought back here and tried. Sligh told a strange story, but the jury believed it. He said he was awakened by a youth who stood beside his bed with a revolver and demanded his money and diamond ring. He grappled with the youth, he told the jury, and during the struggle the lamp in his bedroom was overturned, setting fire to the house. Sligh said he was fleeing from the house when he was struck on the head by two other youths standing outside. He was knocked unconscious and did not remember anything else that occurred until he found himself in Los Angeles.

Only Two Boys Found.

The three youths, he said, he had picked up on the road the previous afternoon. Officers began checking Sligh's story, and eventually it was decided that Harry Loving and Carl and James Hoover were the trio whom Sligh had taken to his home. Search was begun for the three youths, but only two, the Hoovers, were found. They said they did not know where Loving was, that he had left them, and that they had never heard from him again.

Officers suspected that Loving was slain in the Sligh home. They arrested Sligh and the Hoover youths and charged them with murdering Loving and then burning the Sligh home in order to cover up their crime.

The Hoovers, both of whom are from West Virginia, denied they had killed Loving, while Sligh stuck to the fantastic story which had been convincing to the jury trying him for conspiracy to defraud insurance companies.

Solicitor General R. S. Foy of the Tifton judicial district of Georgia, began a thorough investigation. It was at his request that exhumation of the grave at Seneca, S. C., was made.

1777 Court Record Unearthed in Attic

Martinsville, Va.—Preparations now in progress for renovation of Henry county courthouse have solved a mystery of long standing.

Original records of the first court held here in 1777, which disappeared suddenly many years ago, have been found with some musty documents in the attic. It had for years been believed that the old book had been stolen.

The volume is the minute book of the first court and gives the first proceedings. It lists also all of the taxpayers in the county and their holdings from the year 1779 to 1780 and gives the names of those who swore allegiance to the crown in Revolutionary days as well as those who would not and who enlisted in Abraham Penn's company of soldiers which fought in that war.

Parisian Bus Drivers Face New Speed Test

New York.—Paris bus drivers who apply for driving licenses are now required to face a strange piece of apparatus, with a stranger name, the "perceptotaquimeter," which tests their ability to judge the speed of approaching vehicles. The inventor of the perceptotaquimeter, Prof. Emilio Mira, of Barcelona, recently arrived in this country to confer with American psychologists.

The prospective bus driver, Professor Mira explains, is seated 15 feet away from a table on which three rods are rigged up with pulleys and a rheostat, so that the rods can be moved at varying speeds and in different directions. If the driver can estimate quickly and accurately the time at which the rods will meet he is considered a good risk at estimating the speed of passing street cars, autos, dogs and other traffic hazards

Fisherman Tell of Landing Sea Dragon

Beach Haven, N. J.—A fish ceases to be a fish when it grows wings spreading nine feet, develops eyes in its ears, a five-foot tail and two feet each equipped with two toes. It becomes a sea monster. According to the tale by Thomas Bowen, fisherman, it was a sea monster and not a fish that caught in his net. Finding the weight too great for him, Bowen called four other fishermen to help him. The five struggled from shortly before seven in the morning until eleven. The monster they finally beached weighed 440 pounds, measured nearly twelve feet and presented a cream-colored front and a royal purple back, the story goes.

Trace of Early Man Sought in Alaska

Juneau, Alaska.—Disappointed in an attempt to find evidence that man first came to the North American continent from Asia by way of Alaska, Dr Ales Hrdlicka, Smithsonian institution anthropologist, is on his way south after covering 5,000 miles along the Yukon river between its source and its mouth, since early last June. While finding a number of skulls, none of them was over 150 years old, Doctor Hrdlicka said. He hopes to return to Alaska to continue his search, probably on the Kushkokwim river, where he believes he may be successful.

Unnecessary Pain!

Nowadays, people take Bayer Aspirin for many little aches and pains, and as often as they encounter any pain.

Why not? It is a proven antidote for pain. It works!

And Bayer Aspirin tablets are utterly harmless. You have the medical profession's word for that; they do not depress the heart.

So, don't let a cold "run its course." Don't wait for a headache to "wear off." Or regard neuralgia, neuritis, or even rheumatism as something you must endure. Only a physician can cope with the cause of such pain, but you can always turn to Bayer Aspirin for relief.

Bayer Aspirin is always available, and it always helps. Familiarize yourself with its many uses, and avoid a lot of needless suffering.

New Type of Submarine Carries Battle Plane

Only tomorrow knows what horrors the "next war" will bring. Hardly a week passes without announcement of some new device or combination of devices for the destruction of human beings and property, says the Pathfinder Magazine.

The latest important announcement of this kind comes from London. The British have developed a submarine from which a battle airplane can be launched within a few minutes after it comes to the surface. The large turret usually used for the accommodation of a powerful gun has been converted into a plane carrier. Such a combination of undersea and airplane craft was first designed by an Italian. France took it up and now Britain claims to have improved it to perfection.

Remarkable Ape Dead

Azwas, giant six-foot ape, captured in the Dutch East Indies and the subject of much controversy among scientists, died at Rochester, N. Y., recently. Azwaz was neither gorilla nor chimpanzee, it was said, yet weighed 400 pounds, the only simian of his kind ever captured. Meyer Aaron, the ape's owner, valued him at $20,000. He was being exhibited at a local park at the time of his death. His daily diet of seventy-eight bananas had fallen to a point where he refused food, and it required ten men to give him medicine. In Azwas' native jungles his kind were known as "maskuda" or "men of the woods," and were rare.

GRAVEYARD TELLS STORY OF TOWN THAT ONCE WAS

Neshonoc (Wis.) Now Only Memory of One-Time Prosperous Village.

West Salem, Wis.—The story of a boom town, that died when a ruthless railroad failed to come through and touch it with prosperity.

Almost the only evidence that the village of Neshonoc ever existed is its cemetery, and the old timber dam which ran the Neshonoc mill. The cemetery is used by West Salem and the dam generates electricity for this city.

Neshonoc has vanished. A row of cellar holes, becoming shallower and shallower with the years, extends along highway 16, where this flourishing village once stood, and, if anyone is interested enough to search, other shallow cellar holes may be found where cross streets once ran.

There was no West Salem back in the 1850s when the railroad came through this region to La Crosse. Only a house or two stood here, looking to Neshonoc, a mile or two away, as the center of things. As in other cases, some Neshonoc land owners saw in the approach of the railroad a chance to get rich quick by holding it up for a right of way.

While they were still chuckling over the discomfiture of the railroad magnates over the price they had asked, the railroad bought a right of way to the south, and Neshonoc's life's blood began to ebb away to West Salem, where the rails passed.

Some houses were abandoned. Buildings worth the labor were moved over to West Salem. The disintegration of the village was rapid. The old church stood for many years alone where the village had been, and people came up from West Salem to attend services. Finally that too was moved away. Then the old schoolhouse was abandoned and a new one built elsewhere.

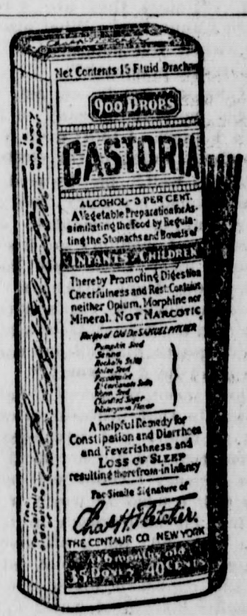
Budapest.—Horse meat has become a staple among the poor of Hungary since the war, although before that there was not one butcher shop in the country where one could obtain it. Several thousand army horses were slaughtered this year to provide meat for poverty-stricken homes.

Restless Children



Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

The Desert Moon Mystery

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

© by Doubleday Doran Co., Inc. WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Sam Stanley, wealthy owner of the Desert Moon ranch, tells his housekeeper, Mary Magin, that his former wife's twin daughters, Danielle and Gabrielle, are coming to the ranch to live, their mother being dead and their father, Daniel Canneziano, who had been the cause of Sam's divorcing his wife, in the penitentiary. Sam has adopted a boy, John, now grown to manhood, and a girl, Martha, physically healthy but weak-minded Mrs. Ollie Ricker, Martha's nurse, lives with them. Hubert Hand, a wanderer, and Chadwick Caufield, John's wartime buddy, an expert ventriloquist, are the other members of the household. The girls arrive. Mrs. Magin has cause to believe there is a sinister motive in the twins' presence at the ranch. John becomes engaged to Danielle. Caufield shows a pronounced liking for Gabrielle.

CHAPTER IV

The Cabin

The girls had been on the Desert Moon a little better than six weeks when, one evening, Sam came out into my kitchen where I was setting bread. "Mary," he began, real solemn for him, "the ancients used to have cities that they called cities of refuge. No matter what a fellow had done, if he could get inside into one of those cities, he was safe. Your kitchen always kinda seems like that to me—a city of refuge."

"Lands, Sam," I said, "what have you been up to that you are heading this safety first movement?"

"I haven't been up to anything," Sam answered, "and I don't aim to be. But, Mary, some time ago you came to me with some suspicions. I laughed them off. I am not laughing now. I'm worried. Queer things are going on around here. What I want to know, now is what do you know?"

"Nothing. What do you know?"

"Nothing."

"What do you suspect, then, Sam?"

"Nothing. What do you?"

"Nothing."

That, I see now, wouldn't have been a bad place for us both to laugh. Neither of us did.

"Have you any idea," Sam questioned, "why the girls go prowling all over the place, afoot and horseback, daytimes, and nighttimes, too, when they should be in their beds?"

"Well, all I know is just what I've known all along. They are hunting for something."

"Sure they are hunting for something. But what?"

"I don't know. But whatever it is, they are going to use it to get revenge, to injure maliciously somebody."

"Revenge, h—l!" Sam said.

"Have it your own way. Only I happened one night to hear Gaby say to Danny that they had come to this ranch for the purpose of revenge."

"Revenge, h—l!" Sam repeated himself. "Unless they are sore at me about Canneziano. What else did they say, when you happened to overhear this revenge remark?"

If he was ready, at last, to listen, I was more than ready to tell what little I knew. I told; even to confessing about hiding in the clothes closet.

"Well, well," he drawled, when I had finished my story, "we are probably making a mountain out of a molehill. I wouldn't go pussy-footing around after them, any more, if I were you, Mary. There's a screw loose somewhere, that's sure; but it is not in the Desert Moon's machinery. We've got nothing on our consciences. We don't need to worry."

Don't need to worry! Sam and I, sitting in that peaceful kitchen, talking so smart and frivolous, and deciding that we did not need to worry is a memory I could well be shed of. We didn't need to worry a bit more than if I'd used arsenic in my covered pan of bread; not a bit more than if there had been a den of rattlesnakes in the cupboard under the sink, or gasoline instead of water in the tank on the back of the stove. That is how safe and peaceful we really were, at that minute, if we had had sense enough to know it. When I realize that four weeks from that very evening, three people—

But I guess it would be better to tell things straight along, as they happened. It seems to me a good book cannot be hurried, any more than a good cake can. "Mix and sift the dry ingredients," is the way all recipes for cakes begin.

* * * * * * * *

For three days, beginning with the Fourth of July, there was to be a big celebration and rodeo at Telko.

Sam suggested at noon on the second of July, while we were at dinner, that maybe all of us would like to go; all, that is, except Martha and himself. Celebrations were never good for Martha.

I spoke right up and said to count me out. I know the deserts in July. But the boys were enthusiastic about it, and Danny was interested. Gaby, coming in late, greeted the idea with the same enthusiasm with which a woman greets moths in the clothes closet.

"Whence the crave for a Fourth of July celebration?" she asked.

"We have never seen a rodeo," Danny answered.

"Go, by all means," Gaby said. "Buy pink lemonade. March in the parade. Ride in the Liberty car. Mrs Magin would be stunning as the goddess of Liberty, with—"

'Don't let my stunningness stop anything," I said. "I am not going."

"We'll think it over," Danny said. "It would be a long, hot ride. Probably we should all have a pleasanter time, right here at home."

But there was something in the way she had said it, too quickly in answer to a look from Gaby, that made me think there was more to her backing out of the plan than had appeared on the surface.

Gaby had just begun her dinner. The rest of us had finished; so, according to our custom, we excused ourselves and went our ways. Chad tried to stay with Gaby, but Martha fussed and insisted that he come with her.

I had a sure feeling that Danny would return, and that she and Gaby would have something to say to each other. I went into the kitchen, stepped back into the pass-pantry, and opened the pass-window a crack.

Just as I opened the window I heard John say, "I thought Danny was in here."

"No," Gaby said. "But won't you come in and talk to me?"

"What about?"

"About—this."

I dared not peek, so I did not know what she meant until she said, "Why won't you kiss me?"

"Shall I say, I don't want to pick flowers in Hubert Hand's yard?"

"I hate you!"

"Don't be sore at me, Gaby," John said. "But I'm telling you, that's a lot nearer the truth than—than what you usually say."

John was one of the poorest talkers ever heard. One of those strong, silent men supposed to abound in the West, and who are likewise supposed to make every word that they say count. If John's did, they counted backwards.

"My dear, haven't I proven over and over again that I love you? In every way. I have made myself ridiculous here, because I haven't been able to conceal my feelings for you."

"I think," John said, "that most of that stuff you pull is just to spite Danny. It doesn't spite her, though. She knows she's the only girl in the world for me. I wish you'd cut it out—all of that, Gabby. Won't you, and just be good friends?"

"You'd not want me for an enemy, would you?"

"Getting at anything, going any place, Gaby?"

"Perhaps. If Danny should hear that you have made love to me—"

"I have never made love to you. It would be your word against mine. I think Danny would take mine, if it came to a showdown. Listen here, child; don't you try to make trouble between Danny and me."

"Meaning?"

"Nothing. Except that it wouldn't be healthy for anyone who tried it."

"Boo-oo! Dangerous Dan McGrew stuff? Out where men are men? Killer loose tonight—all that, eh, Johnnie?"

A door opened. "John," came in Danny's voice, "uncle is looking everywhere for you."

"What," Danny questioned, when the door had closed behind John, "made you both look so angry, just now?"

"Never mind. Are you going to that fools' celebration, with only a day or two left, now?"

"I suppose not, if you don't want me to. I'd love going. I know there is no use in staying here."

"In other words, you would sacrifice my future for a rodeo? I more than half believe that you know—"

"What possible object could I have?"

"Many, my dear. Very many. Though I think that getting rid of me would outweigh the others. Listen to me, Danielle Canneziano, if I thought that you were keeping this from me, in order to bury me alive in this God-forsaken hole, and force me to watch you and John—"

"Gaby!"

"I've been a fool! Why can't I learn to take into consideration your d—n moralities? Understand this Dan. Don't fancy for one instant that failure is going to keep me here. Did you think, with a weapon like that in my hands, that I'd stand for anything less than a fifty-fifty proposition? Our original plan would have been better—easier, simpler. But I'll have my share out of this, anyway. So, if you do know—"

"Gaby, I don't know. I'll swear that I don't. How could I? But surely you wouldn't—wouldn't attempt—"

"That is for you to say, darling."

Darling, as she said it then, was as wicked a word as I had ever listened to.

"For me to say?"

"Give John to me. I've changed my mind. If you'll do that, I'll stay right here, and settle down, and do an imitation of a moral, model wife that would satisfy even you."

"Gaby, you speak as if John were a child's toy, to be passed about. I couldn't give him to you, if I were willing to."

"You could, and you know it. You won't. So, that's that. But keep your righteous fingers out of my life; stop your d—n preaching, and meddling. I am going to the cabin now. You would better come with me."

"We've searched that cabin a thousand times."

"All the same, it is the one logical place; far removed, and under cover."

The cabin is the one Sam built to live in when he first came to the valley. It is up Boulder creek, about half a mile from the ranchhouse. Sam has kept it in repair, inside and out; owing, I think, to sentimental memories, though he declares it is because he dislikes wreckage on the place. When John and Martha were little things, Sam used to hide their Christmas presents up there, under the shelf in the kitchen.

The shelf, about three feet wide, is built across one end of the kitchen. It served Sam for a table, pantry, and sink. Being a man, he built it right handily, like a chest, so that the entire top of it had to be raised to get to the storage place underneath. There was no secret about it. All anyone had to do, was to move everything off the top of it, and lift the lid. But I had read how the hardest problems for detectives always turned out to be something that had been too simple to notice; so my plan was to go up there and raise the lid.

On my way, I met the girls coming home. I imagined that they looked at me with suspicion. I passed a remark about the sweet-smelling clover hay, and hurried right along.

Half an hour later, when I was expecting instant death at any minute, I thought about that sweet clover smell, and how unappreciative I have been of it, and of the blue sky and fresh air, and of the green things, lighted yellow with sunshine, and I took a vow that, if I ever did get a chance to enjoy them again, I would spend the remainder of my life in so doing, and in being grateful to the Creator of them.

In the cabin, I went at once to the kitchen; and, removing fish-baskets, fly-books, and reels from the shelf, lifted it back.

I am sure that I had expected to find it empty. What I had not expected to find, and what I certainly had never hoped to find, was what was there: any number of neatly wrapped packages, addressed to Mr. Sam Stanley, sent by express, and labeled, variously, "Danger," "Explosives," "Handle with Care."

It did not take any common sense to know, straight off, that, sent to him or not, Sam was not mixed up in any business that had to do with explosives, bombs, and Bolshevism. It was easy enough to remember, then, that Sam had not been to Rattail for the past ten days; that Hubert Hand had been making the trips down for the mail, expressage, and supplies.

Just as he came into my mind, I heard his voice. It was a startling coincidence; but I need a better excuse than that, for surely no mortal ever did a more foolish thing than I did then. I climbed into that chest, along with those packages, and lowered the lid down over me. If I had any idea, I suppose it must have been a desire not to let him know that I had discovered his secret—his and Gaby's together, undoubtedly—but I can't remember having any thought at all until, just as the lid closed, I remembered the sad poem about the bride and the mistletoe chest.

Then I heard, through the thin boards, Hubert Hand, talking to some one, come into the kitchen. I chose death by suffocation or combustion.

"My dear woman," were the first words I heard from him, "you may set your mind at rest. I am not going to marry the girl. I am not a marrying man, as you know; and, if I were, she wouldn't have me."

"You leave her alone, then. Understand me. Leave her alone."

If I believed my ears, that was Mrs. Ricker's voice; that was Mrs.

I Am Sure That I Had Expected to Find It Empty.

Ricker, not only talking, but talking like that to Hubert Hand.

"You flatter me," he said. "Jealous, still, after all these years? I told you that I wouldn't marry her, and that she wouldn't have me, if I were willing to."

"Wouldn't she, though? Wouldn't she? She is mad about you. She can't look at you without love in her eyes, nor speak to you without love in her voice. She tries to hide it; but she can't hide it from me. I know. She loves you."

I am not sure whether I read it, or whether I figured it out for myself; but I do know it is a fact that no woman ever accuses another woman of being in love with a man unless she could imagine being in love with him herself.

"As to that," Hubert Hand said, "what possible difference would it make to you, Ollie?"

"Only that I would kill her, and you, too, before I would let her have you."

"Easy on, there, my girl. Your last attempt at murder—at least I hope that was your last attempt, was not, you may recall, very successful."

"I would be successful another time."

I kept quiet; very quiet. Surrounded, in there by explosives, and out there by people who talked of murder as calmly and as comfortably as if they were discussing moss-roses, very quiet did not seem half quiet enough.

They went into the other room of the cabin and stayed there for a few minutes. I could not hear what they were saying, but I did not budge an inch. After I heard them passing the window, and was sure that they had left the cabin, I remained, very quiet, in the chest for about five minutes longer before climbing out of it.

I was progressing toward home, shivering in every bone, limping, since both my legs had gone to sleep, when Sam, riding his bad-tempered bronco named Wishbone, came up behind me and dismounted.

"Corns bad, Mary?" he questioned. "Want to climb up on Wishbone and have me lead him?"

"When I go to meet death," I told him, "I shan't go on the back of a nasty-tempered bronco. Considering that everyone on the Desert Moon is, at this minute, in mortal danger of their lives, all your lighthearted jesting seems pretty much out of place."

I told him, then, about the packages of explosives hidden under the shelf. I had not told him about my climbing in with them; so I was in no way prepared for his actions.

He stopped. He dropped Wishbone's bridle. He put both his hands on his stomach and leaned over and burst into uproarious laughter. "Ho-ho-ho," it rolled out, seeming to fill the entire valley.

"Fireworks," he gasped. "I got them for Martha. Going to surprise her on the Fourth. Sent for them months ago. Hid them up there. Ho-ho-ho! I told you to stop pussy-footing around, Mary. Ho-ho-ho! 'Do not look for wrong and evil, you will find them if you do—'"

With as much dignity as a heavy woman, with both of her legs asleep, could muster, I turned and left him. His words and his actions had certainly given me one decision. From this time on, I would tell Sam Stanley nothing.

When I got back to the house, John was driving up the road in the sedan. He had been to Rattail for supplies and for the mail. He tossed the mail-bag out to me and drove around to the kitchen door to unload. There was a letter for Gaby, postmarked France.

About a month before this, Gaby had received another letter that was a duplicate of this one; the same gray paper, the same sprawling handwriting. Instead of taking it indifferently, as she did other letters, and reading it wherever she happened to be, she had snatched it out of my hand and had run off to her room. All that evening she had seemed to be preoccupied, and worried. Sending only two letters in close to two months, it seemed to me that whoever had written them did not write unless he or she had something of importance to say. I was still puzzling over it, when Gaby came into the room.

Sure enough, she snatched it out of my hands, just as she had done with the other letter, and ran straight upstairs with it.

When John and Danny came in, a few minutes later, I went upstairs. Habit stopped me at Gaby's door for a minute, with my ear to the keyhole. Faintly, sounds don't come plainly through our thick doors, I heard the portable typewriter that she brought with her when she came to the ranch, click, clicking away.

I was tuckered and tired. So, after telephoning some instructions to the kitchen, I took plenty of time to tidy myself up. I dawdled in my bath, and I cut my corns, and rubbed hair tonic into my scalp. But, when on my way downstairs again, I stopped for a second at Gaby's door, the typewriter was still going. There was nothing to be made out of it, so I went along. It was fortunate that I did, because, before I had reached the top of the stairway, Gaby's door flung open and she called to me, with something in her voice that made me shake in my shoes.

I turned and looked at her. Her face wore an expression that was not human; an expression that would have made any decent woman do as I did, and turn her eyes quickly away.

"Tell Danny to come up here," she said.

I hurried off downstairs, and delivered the message to Danny who was with John in the living room.

"What's the matter, Mary?" John questioned, when Danny had gone upstairs. "You look as if you had seen a ghost."

"I think," I answered, "that I have—the ghost of Sin."

"Doggone that girl," he said. "I wish she were in Jericho."

"Gaby, you mean?"

"You're darn right. She's causing all the trouble around here."

"What trouble?" I asked, just for a feeler.

"I don't know—exactly. She keeps Danny miserable. But that isn't it, or not all of it. Don't you seem to feel trouble around here, all the time? I thought everyone did. I do, Gosh knows."

"I know," I said. "I feel it, too. I think Sam does, though he won't altogether admit it. Just the same, John, there isn't a thing we can put our fingers on, is there?"

"I suppose not. Sometimes, though, when I see Danny looking as she looked when she went upstairs just now, I feel as if it would be a good thing if somebody would put their fingers around that vixen's throat."

"John," I spoke sharply to him, "don't say things like that. You don't mean it. It is wrong to say it."

I was sure that he did not mean it. I was sure that only the voice of one of his rare ugly moods had spoken, and that the wicked thought had died with the wicked words. But, from that day to this, I have never repeated those words to a living soul. Because that was the way that Gaby was murdered: choked to death, with great brutal bruises left on her throat.

Feign Death to Escape Its Actual Visitation

Nature has provided the majority of animals with some means of self-preservation. The bold overcome the enemy by fighting "tooth and claw"; the timid escape by rapid flight. Some creatures take shelter behind a plating of armor; others rely mainly upon their protective coloration. Some inject deadly poisons; others emit nauseating fluids and even electric shocks.

But probably the most remarkable of all methods of evading the enemy is that of shamming death; and one need not necessarily travel beyond the confines of one's own garden for proof of the fact that some creatures do sham death, for quite a number of caterpillars, spiders, toads and snakes are addicted to the habit, says M. D. D. in the Times of India Illustrated Weekly.

It is a well-known fact that certain birds will pretend to be lame or wounded in the wing in order to draw away intruders from the vicinity of their eggs or young. The American ground dove, the ruffled grouse, the green plover and the wild duck are among those that practice this art of deception. Among birds that actually sham death may be mentioned the land rail and the water rail.

Had Few Nerves in Teeth

Study of the teeth of the saber-tooth cats and of the giant wolves that lived and died in prehistoric times, has shown why these animals and their descendants knew no such things as toothache.

Examination of teeth found in asphalt pits in California revealed that, in every case, the teeth of an adult of the species had only a scanty supply of nerves. As the animal grew up, the root canal, which is the main route for the nerves into the pulp chamber of the tooth, became comparatively shut off.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

So Simple

Mrs. Suburbs, who was absorbed in a romance of the Seventeenth century, suddenly looked up at her husband.

"George," she remarked, "listen to this: 'By my halidom, exclaimed Sir Percival, "It is past the hour of 12!' Now, what is a halidom, George?"

"What do you suppose it is?" he responded. "Doesn't the context tell you? Sir What's-his-name said it was past 12 by his halidom, didn't he? Well, I should have thought anybody could have seen that halidom was the make of his watch."

Sight Influences Handwriting

If the average handwriting of a person with normal vision is taken as a standard, that of the individual suffering from nearsightedness will be found to be much smaller and that of the farsighted individual much larger.

The nearsighted person does not realize that his writing is small, for he sees it enlarged, and the farsighted person does not know that he writes large, for his eyes reduce the image for him.

HAS THE LAXATIVE IN YOUR HOME A DOCTOR'S APPROVAL?

Some things people do to help the bowels whenever any bad breath, feverishness, biliousness, or a lack of appetite warn of constipation, really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what will cleanse the system without harm. That is why the laxative in your home should have the approval of a family doctor.

The wonderful product, known to millions as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in many years of practice, and proved safe and reliable for men, women and children. It is made from herbs and other pure ingredients, so it is pleasant-tasting, and can form no habit. You can buy this popular laxative from all drugstores.

A special called meeting was held on Thursday evening of last week by the Colma Volunteer Fire Department, when several members of the San Mateo County Water District committee were present to take up the question of the needs of a county distributing system so that San Mateo county may get its proportion of the Hetch Hetchy water, and also guard against a future shortage, which is inevitable under the rapid growth of the peninsula section, both from the standpoint of population and industries. Captain L. Conserva called the meeting to order and turned the chair over to James T. Casey, who acted as chairman of the evening and introduced the following speakers: M. J. Bartell, assistant city engineer of San Francisco, E. B. Hinman, of Redwood City, James S. James, city engineer of Burlingame, C. Wagner, of the Bank of Italy, Redwood City, and J. E. A. Miller, of Daly City.

LEGION WILL PARTICIPATE IN NAVY DAY OBSERVANCE

Navy Day, October 28, will be observed by many of the American Legion posts throughout California in co-operation with local organizations, according to an announcement from State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid, of Hollywood, representing the World war veterans' organization.

Dr. Howard M. McKinley, of San Francisco, has been designated as California chairman of Navy Day celebrations which are annually held with the co-operation of the Navy Department at Washington.

Letters have been sent by the American Legion officials to the chamber of commerce in the various California cities and the mayor in each community has been asked to issue a proclamation for the observance of Navy Day. Former Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur will make an address over the radio as one of the features of the California program.

In San Francisco, C. C. Thomas Navy Post of the American Legion will sponsor a big banquet to mark the conclusion of the day's activities.

Speakers will be carried to interior California cities, where celebrations will be held by American Legion posts, by naval airplanes.

SIDELIGHTS

The homely saying that sometimes one's "eyes are bigger than his stomach" sems to apply to one Earl Brammer, of Ironton, O. He wagered that he would eat 96 eggs at one sitting, but could only stow away 52. His alibi was that he had just eaten a hearty meal beforehand.

We all remember amusing errors of childhood whereby we misinterpreted certain words in memorizing orally taught sentences. A very young movie star recently illustrated this tendency by beginning his Lord's prayer thus: "Our Father, Who art in Heaven, Hollywood be The name."

"The wicked flee when no man pursueth," but so did the innocent in a recent case. Johnny Dirocco, 13, of Tuckahoe, N. J., shooting at a hawk, saw a distant man fall and lie motionless. Visions of a hangman's noose caused Johnny to flee and hide in a swamp for 30 hours until a searching party found him. His bullet had overturned a stuffed scarecrow.

Four-leaf clovers are said to bring good luck, but what of an eightleaf one? Leonard Hicks of the Wisconsin Rapids Tribune speaking: "Ed Alft found an eight-leaf clover and gave it to me to display at the newspaper office. On the way there I found three $1 bills."

Mrs. Malaprop up to date, according to the Altoona Tribune: "She took sick with pantomime poisoning: doctors diagrammed her case and gave a hypocritical injection of a serial, but she passed into a state of chromo."

Speaking of world's series baseball, Elmer Smith holds one record which may never be equalled. Batting for Cleavland in the 1920 series between the Indians and Brooklyn he hit a home run with the bases full.

A prospective taxi fare from Detroit to New York for which arrangements were made by a prosperous appearing gentleman, looked good to W. J. Ewen of the motor metropolis. At Yonkers the passenger excused himself for a moment and has not been heard of since. Mr. Ewen chugged back home, 700 miles, probably thankful that he didn't lose his taxicab.

BOYS AND GIRLS

Arthur Brown, aged 12, a farm boy living near Andalusia, Ala., picked 151 pounds of cotton one morning recently, finishing his task by 11 o'clock.

"Red" Solomon of New York has been signed up as a future player by the Chicago Cubs at the age of 13, being the youngest player ever to attract the notice of a major league team.

Laura Daubman, 4-year-old Russian immigrant girl of Oakland, Calif., recently made her radio debut as a piano soloist. Her repertoire includes twenty Bach preludes which she has memorized.

Arthur Hanes, aged 12, son of a minister in Birmingham, Ala., won a handsome pony as a prize for the best letter on safety precautions in traffic.

Eugene Sullivan, 14-year-old New York messenger boy, found stocks worth $7,000 on the street and would only take $2 as a reward for returning them.

Sarah Palfrey, 16-year-old tennis star of Boston, won the women's eastern turf courts title this year. She recently defeated Mrs. Sheppard Baron, a noted English player.

W. Arthur Ferguson of Macon, Ga., won the class A title in the junior rifle corps match at Camp Perry, O., with a score of 374 out of a possible 400.

Irma Spear, aged 5, of Columbia City, Ind., saved a 3-year-old child from drowning in Crooked lake, near her home.

Ferris Thomas, a schoolboy of Knoxville, Tenn., made an airplane model which stayed aloft two minutes and a half, breaking the record for toy planes.

Gertrude Rentz, aged 14, won first prize in a contest in Philadelphia for having the longest hair done up in pigtails.

William Newman, Jack Schoenhair and William Marshall ran into a dust-covered tar pit, while chasing rabbits and had sunk to their chins when rescued by Los Angeles firemen.

Marie Skotnicki, a 7-year-old girl of Warsaw, is said to have gotten the habit of talking in pure Gaelic, a language which she had never heard, but which was the native tongue of her grandmother.

Aubrey Conner, a farm boy of Hillsdale, Okla., has shown the grand championship steer of the junior livestock show in Oklahoma City for four years in succession.

Paul Thomas, aged 13, of Salt Lake City, holds 88 Boy Scout merit badges, leaving onely one more, the archery badge, to be won. He expectc to acquire it this fall.

Robert Morse, aged 10, of Chicago drove two burglars out of his home by flourishing an old toy pistol.

Pat Brazier of London, aged 15, is considered the coming woman tennis champion of England, and perhaps of the world, being ranked close to Betty Nuthall, the famed young British star.

Lawrence Mattison, aged 15, of Rockford, Ill., recently made his first solo airplane flight after less than 10 hours instruction in the air.

Mary McDonald, 6-year-old Boston girl, has won 14 medals and a diamond ring as prizes for her interpretation of Scotch dances.

Sara Morehead of Conway, Ark., was graduated from Galloway Woman's College at the age of 17, the youngest ever to finish at that institution.

Mary Ruth Patton, aged 2, won first prize of $50 and a silver cup at a West Palm Beach, Fla., baby show.

Miguel Candela, 12-year-old violin prodigy and Paris Conservatory prize winner, was highly praised by critics when he appeared in New York.

James Frederick Smith of Detroit, aged 11, was left $2,000,000 by a couple who adopted him after his father had been killed in action in France.

About 65,000 boys in the state of New York work in daytime and go to school at night, and three out of four have savings accounts.

Gloria Matthews, aged 3, of Lakewood, N. J., was crowned champion of American babies at the annual Atlantic City baby parade.

Billy Grey, aged 5, of Levy, Ark., dragged his 2-year-old sister from their burning home which he had accidentally set on fire.

Jack Eddy, aged 14, of Revelstoke, B. C., probably saved his life by pretending to be dead when overtaken by a bear, as he had been instructed to do in such an emergency. The animal stood over him a moment and then sauntered away.

BAYSORE ROAD TO BE FORMALLY OPENED SUNDAY

mate settlement. The pavement installed is heavier than most present ones.

The forty-foot width permits of dividing this highway into four trafifc lanes of ten feet each—an idea developed in California and being rapidly copied elsewhere. Slow speed traffic in the outside lanes, rapid to the middle and a decided increase in capacity of the highway itself is what makes this "lane" idea so popular.

Most of the right of way through South San Francisco has been secured to provide a sixty-foot pavement through that city. The forty-foot underpass south of that point was really built as an eighty-foot subway, and can be easily widened whenever traffic justifies.

The Bayshore Highway is not a scenic boulevard, but rather it is a highway of utility. It satisfies not only the demand for an additional peninsula to the center of San Francisco.

The engineers who have been in direct charge of the work on the newly-completed units and who, in the face of many difficulties, carried this construction through to successfull completion, are Colonel John H. Skeggs, division engineer at San Francisco for the California Highway Commission, and Clyde E. Healy, assistant city engineer of San Francisco.

A SUMMER OF RECORDS

Never before were so many different new aircraft records established in so short a period as during the last few months. A brief resume of the most important may be of interest.

Frank Hawkes flew from New York to Los Angeles in 19 hours 12 minutes on May 27, returning two days later in 17 hours 38 minutes, both being non-stop flights.

Starting in May, a succession of new endurance records were made, refueling in the air, first 172 hours, then 174, 246 and finally the amazing record of 420 hours, completed by Jackson and O'Brien in the St. Louis Robin on July 30.

On August 20 Mamer and Walker finished the first round-trip non-step flight across the continent, flying from Spokane to New York and back to Spokane without landing, a total of 7,200 miles. They re-fuel in the air at New York.

In England, Captain Orlebar set a new airplane speed record, flying at the rate of 368 miles and hour, or more than six miles a minute. Other British flyers made records almost as speedy.

But the outstanding feat of the year in international interest was the flight of the Graf Zeppelin around the world in twenty days, making only three stops, during the month of August.

Other important events in aviation since May include two flights across the Atlantic, while a third failed with the loss of the aviators; a woman's cross country derby from California to Cleveland, in which sixteen finished, two dropped out and one was killed; Lindbergh's inauguration of a new mail line to South America, accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh, and the establishment of regular 48-hour combined air and mail schedules between New York and Los Angeles.

AVIATORS' WIVES

While aviators fly across continents, across oceans, and to the poles, their wives wait and watch. Most of them doubtless worry, but if so they seldom say much about it, particularly for publication.

Recently the New York World induced a few of them to talk briefly on their lot, among them the wives of Commander Byrd, Clarence Chamberlain and Roger Williams, three flyers who have crossed the Atlantic and performed other prodigious aerial feats.

Mrs. Byrd, whose husband has flown to the North Pole and expects soon to reach the South Pole, said: "My most awful nightmare is that the world has suddenly turned star-shaped, and that there are now five poles." Meaning, of course, that if such a thing should happen, Commander Byrd would want to fly to all five.

Mrs. Chamberlain said: "Ladies who want a grand passion had better stick to their business men." Mrs. Williams said: "For a whole year at a time I hardly see Roger at all. The economic conditions of aviation make our living as insecure as everything else."

We have seen no expression on this subject from Mrs. Lindbergh, who so far has generally flown with the Colonel. But it would not be surprising if she should tire of the strenuous life, or possibly meet disaster in an evil moment. It takes courage and fortitude, we imagine, to meet the trials of an aviator's wife.

AN EXPENSIVE GUEST

Count Ilya Tolstoy of Russia, now lecturing in the United States, has a very thrifty manager, who does not propose to allow the Count to lend his presence to any function without pay. So, when a group of Chicago professors sought to honor the Count by inviting him to a luncheon, the manager wired an acceptance, but stipulated that a fee of $50 would be charged.

The hospitably inclined professors were at first dumbfounded by the suuggestion that they must pay $50 for the privilege of entertaining the Count. After consultation, they delegated one of their number to reply to the manager, which he did in the following telegram:

"How do you get that way? We might be able to afford breakfast or a chocolate soda with the Count. What is you scale for tea and toast with Tolstoy? Also go jump in the lake."

A pleasing part of the story is that Count Tolstoy later told it on himself and exhibited the telegram to amused newspaper men.

GROWING U. S. EXPORTS

In a review of the United States exports and imports for the fiscal year ended June 30, the Department of Commerce shows that exports increased in value about 10 per cent, while imports increased about 3½ per cent over the previous fiscal year.

Exports increased by approximately a half billion dollars, although grain exports fell off, so that the increase was accounted for chiefly by the greater exportation of manufactured goods. In the matter of merchandise the United States exported more than a billion dollars in excess of imports.

In view of the higher wages paid by our manufacturers in comparison with foreign factories, this showing is a high tribute to American production methods and marketing skill.

The first step in farm relief, naturally enough, is to have a Senatorial investigation of the Farm Board.

PAULINE FREDERICK SCORES HIT AT CURRAN THEATRE

With one of the most superb productions that ever graced the stage of the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, Pauline Frederick has scored a decisive hit in "The Queen Was in the Parlour." Always a pronounced favorite here, the lovely star has been accorded a personal ovation at each performance since the opening night. On Monday night, October 21, the attraction enters the third week of its engagement.

Beautiful, gracious, charming and queenly are terms that have often been applied to Miss Frederick. These attributes of her vivid personality are conspicious in the stellar role of Nadya. With her usual consummate artistry Miss Frederick portrays the daughter of a Continental royal family who indulges herself in reckless gaiety in Paris, where she falls desperately in love with a commoner. She is about to be married to him when she is unexpectedly recalled to her native country to rule as Queen. At the royal palace on the eve of Nadya's marriage of state to a prince of a neighboring principality her lover appears. The final scenes reveal the dramatic events that swirl about the hapless Queen and the outcome of the secret resumption of the old romance in Nadya's private apartments.

With its moments of comedy, pathos and tragedy, the Noel Coward play gives the popular star wide scope for her histrionic talents. The producers, Belasco and Curran, have surrounded Miss Frederick with players of recognied ability, including, Vernon Steel, Lawrence Grant, William Stack, Grace Hampton, Eily Malyon, Tina Marshall and Dudley Carter.

BANK OF ITALY NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION, a National Banking Association, Trustee.

By JOHN F. RIVOLTA, Assistant Trust Officer.

Oct. 4, 11, 18, 25, 1929.

J. A. BACIGALUPI-NAMES ARNOLD MOUNT AS PRESIDENT OF BANK OF ITALY

JAMES A. BACIGALUPI , ARNOLD J. MOUNT

President Bacigalupi nominates his successor at meeting of Board of Directors. New Executive is head of California Bankers Association. A. Pedrini selected to head two affiliated companies. Change becomes effective on October 17, which is bank's twenty-fifth anniversary.

UNDER the plan of rotation of executives each five years—established by A. P. Giannini in 1924—James A. Bacigalupi, president of the Bank of Italy, announced Tuesday, October 8, following a meeting of the Board of Directors, that upon the completion of his five-year term of office, October 17, he would recommend the selection of A. J. Mount, vice-president of the institution as his successor.

At the same time it was announced that A. Pedrini, who has been associated with the bank since its inception in 1904, and who was its first cashier, will become president of National Bankitaly Company and of Bankitaly Company of America, while L. M. Giannini will accede to the chairmanship of the Board of Directors of both organizations.

Bacigalupi is to become a member of the bank's Advisory Committee with L. M. Giannini and P. C. Hale. He will also continue to serve on the Board of Directors and the General Executive Committee. In his new office, he will share with the other members of the Advisory Committee the responsibility for shaping major policies, and counseling with the directing heads of the bank.

The organization in charge of the affairs of the Bank of Italy cannot be surpassed in efficiency, harmony or loyalty, said Bacigalupi in his report to the Board of Directors.

The Bank of Italy will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its foundation on October 17, at which time, the official changes outlined will be made.

EDUCATION WEEK TO BE OBSERVED BY VETERANS

Joining the celebration of "Armistice Day", November 11, with the observance of American Education Week, which begins on that date, more than 50,000 Californian World War Veterans, acting through the various American Legion Posts, will participate in the movement aimed at focusing public attention upon the schools, acquainting the public with the work of the schools, with their ideals, achievements and needs.

State Commander Clarence L. Kincaid of Hollywood, acting for the American Legion, has outlined the official program for the week of November 11-17 during which time the national observance of American Education Week will be held. The program for 1929 is built around the seven cardinal objectives of education.

Helen Fetch, 15-year-old Los Angeles girl, is one of the greatest gymnasts living, her acrobatic feats being amazing to experts in that line.

WESTERN PACIFIC TO BALLAST TRACK

On November 1 The Western Pacific Railroad Company will begin the ballasting of its main line between Stockton and Sacramento, a distance of 47 miles. The sum of $400,000 will be expended on this ballasting work, of which approximately $185,000 will be for labor.

This work is part of the six year program for the improvement of the roadway and equipment of the Western Pacific which was adopted in 1927 and which involves a total expenditure of approximately $18,000,000.

In ballasting the track between Stockton and Sacramento 174,200 tons of crushed rock ballast will be used, this being equivalent to 3,600 car loads.

A force of 250 men will be employed with C. A. Combs, assistant engineer, in charge of the field work under the direction of Col. J. W. Williams, chief engineer of the Western Pacific. The work will be done at this time of the year so as to take advantage of traffic and weather conditions, and also to provide employment during the slack season for labor used on work of this character.

It will take about four months to complete the balasting between Stockton and Sacramento.

INDIANS INTERESTED IN HIGHER EDUCATION

A growing interest on the part of Indian parents in the education of their children is observed throughout the Goverment's reservations, it was announced recently by H. B. Pearis, general superintendent of Indian Affairs. Once the task in Indian Affairs was to solicit and procure education was to solicit and procure pupils, he stated; now it is a question of providing facilities for the pupils who present themselves.

Mr Peairs cited the example of a reservation school in Oklahoma, which telegraphed the educational division of the Bureau of Indian Affairs that a relatively large number of Indian children were turned away because facilities were not available for them.

The Goverment is now endeavoring to place the Indian children in the public schools, instead of placing them in Goverment schools as was the policy in the past, believing that their association with white children will aid them to grasp more quickly the principals of the white man.

Janitors will shortly resume their non-refueling endurance stunts.

LIVING STANDARD AT HIGH RECORD

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis told a radio audience last Sunday the American standard of living is "almost amazing," the highest ever achieved in world history.

Speaking over a nation-wide hookup he said the average annual food consumption of 500 typical American working families with incomes of from $960 to $2500 per year included 49 pounds of meat, 94 dozen eggs, 236 pounds of sugar, 777 pounds of flour, meal, bread and rolls, and other articles in proportion.

"These salient truths show, in a measure, why immigration has been restricted," Davis continued. "They show why aliens by the million are clamoring to enter the United States. It is because they, too, want these privileges and benefits. In a word, they want the American standard of living.

"We Americans want still more of life's comforts, and we are going to get them. Material things do not constitute happiness, which is merely a condition of mind, but material things, properly used, do help toward happiness. Some of us fall short of our share, yet compared with our past and with other countries we have an American standard of living for which we should be deeply grateful even as we continue to raise it."

CONVENTION OF SPORTSMEN TO BE HELD IN SAN FRANCISCO

A convention of considerable importance to conservationists and wild life lovers will be held at the Whitcomb Hotel, San Francisco, on Friday and Saturday, October 25 and 26. At the conclusion of the convention a banquet will be held at 6:30 p. m., on Saturday, October 26 Ladies are invited and it is hoped that members of the San Mateo County Fish and Game Protective Association, with their ladies, will be represented in numbers.

Mr. Albert Lindley, the well known toastmaster, will preside, and this assures the success of a real sportsmans' banquet. It is expected that delegates from all over the state will attend, and addresses will be made by Stewart Edward White, I. Zellerbach, Senator Sanborn Young and Fred G. Stevenot of the Fish and Game Commission, and other well known advocates of forestry and wild life.

In addition to the members of the San Mateo Association, the public is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. Allen C. Harding, 217 Baldwin avenue, San Mateo, the secretary of the San Mateo County Country Club, is receiving all applications for the banquet and requests that reservations be made at once.

HERE AND THERE

UNLIMITED FUEL SUPPLY FOR SACRAMENTO VALLEY

An article in the California Journal of Development, entitled "Unlimited Fuel and Light for the Sacramento Valley," sets forth that Sacramento has "many economic advantages not possessed by any other city." The article continues:

"The city has access to unlimited quantities of cheap hydro-electricity from the interconnected system of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. Steam electric generating plants are also maintained by the company as safeguards against possible interruption of service. From the main transmission lines radiate other distribution links serving the Sacramento Valley, until the farmers of this valley now have electrical conveniences superior to the majority of other farming centers in the country and comparable to large cities."

AN EVER GROWING PROBLEM

Automobile accident legislation fails to strike at the root of the problem. Liability insurance, which all should carry, indemnifies but cannot prevent accidents.

In most states driving laws are antiquated, inadequate and are laxly enforced. As a result incompetent and careless drivers crowd the public highways, an ever-present menace to the lives of all of us.

Licenses to operate a motor car are usually granted without examination, or without inquiry into the fitness of the applicant. Only a few of our states surround the issuance of licenses with any restrictions. The competent and incompetent, the reckless and careful, the law-breaking and the law-abiding, are treated alike.

It is no wonder that under such circumstances the accident toll continues to mount. We can never check this devastating record until our laws refuse the use of public highways to drivers who have been proven incompetent or chronically reckless.
